OTHER CRASH CAR BLAMED BY CURLEY

Governor Curley today told the Boston Evening American his story of the auto crash which occurred at 1:30 a. m., at Dighton, when he and five other men narrowly escaped death.

The governor, who was shaken up but uninjured, said his car just missed a headon collision in which the impact would have been terrific.

Motor Vehicle Inspector Richard B. O'Connor, after an investigation, placed the blame on the driver of the other automobile which was in collision with the governor's 8-1 car.

According to the inspector, the other driver, Louis Ferreira, Jr., 19, of Ferry street, Fall River, tried to pass another car, became blinded by the headlights of the state automobile and cut across to the left side of the road.

Ferreira's passenger, John Marterra, 18, of Ferry street, Fall River, was taken to St. Ann's hospital, Fall River.

Governor Curley, declaring he had suffered no ill effects from the shakeup, said:

"I was with Henry Lawler and Frank Kane, with Joe Coppenrath driving us. We had been to rallies in New Bedford, Fall River and other towns in that vicinity, and I had spoken last

REBELS KILL 7000 REDS IN DRIVE

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

(Copyright, 1936, by International News Service)

On the Battlefront With the Spanish Foreign Legion at Torrijos, Enroute to Toledo, Sept. 24—It has cost 7000 Red dead but today the Spanish Foreign Legion is within sight of Toledo.

I stood with them today in the tower of the Cathedral of Torrijos and for the first time since the war we with the White side could see the grim towers of the Alcazar.

There, 18 miles across an arid plain across the massive square of the tragic siege on which is being played the greatest epic of this cruel conflict.

BOMBARDED DAILY

Clear as a picture in my binoculars loomed the Alcazar, "Spain's West Point," where a thousand Whites have withstood a siege of ten weeks against 40,000 Reds.

They have endured 420 hours of bombardment—six daily.

They were just last week supposed to have been blown into eternity when Asturian miners tunneled deep beneath the Alcazar and exploded a mine so huge it should

Stole Jar of Cream for Wife, Freed

Sobbing that he stole a half pint of cream for his wife who is expecting a child, John J. Martyniak, 21, of Parkman street, West End, pleaded guilty to theft in municipal court today before Judge James H. Devlin.

Asking for mercy as he cried, Martyniak, who is unemployed, was charged with stealing a jar of cream from the rear steps of a Beacon street, Back Bay home. Its occupant is Mrs. Annie R. Lamb.

He was arrested early today by Patrolman Lawrence F. McCarthy of the Back Bay station and according to police, weeped continually since his arrest.

"I'll never do it again," he told Judge Devlin who, after warning the young man, placed him on probation for six months.

Roosevelt's Red Support

FACTS are facts.

If President Roosevelt could be brought to realize this, there would be a great gain for his dignity and a lessening of his embarrassments.

For one thing, he would be spared so unbecoming a performance as his White House statement of Saturday, with its nervous denial of charges not yet published.

His effort to anticipate their publication neither averted them nor broke their force.

The charge actually made was that the Communists of Moscow and their servile creatures in our midst are lined up behind his candidacy.

The FACT of such support is NOT DISPUTED either by the Communists or President Roosevelt.

Only in uninformed quarters is there any disposition to deny it.

HAMILTON DEMANDS BAN ON DUBINSKY

Special to American Newspapers, Inc.

New York, Sept. 24—John D. Hamilton, Republican national chairman, challenged President Roosevelt to bring about the removal of David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, from Mr. Roosevelt's list of Democratic presidential electors in the State of New York.

Mr. Hamilton issued his challenge to the President just before he boarded a train for Charleston, W. Va., where he is conferring with Republican leaders today.

His statement follows in full:

"I want to put a question to President Roosevelt. I will keep asking it from now until election-day, or until such time as Mr. Roosevelt sees fit to answer.

"The question is this:

"How long, Mr. Roosevelt, do you intend to affront the voters of America by retaining as one of your presidential electors on the Democratic ballot in New York a man who rendered financial aid to Communists in Spain so that they might continue to horrify the civilized world with their murders of clergymen and their pillaging of churches?

"The presidential elector I refer to, Mr. Roosevelt, is Mr. David Dubinsky, a former member of the Socialist party. Mr. Dubinsky sent $5000 to Spanish Communists and boasted of raising $78,000 more.

"You already have had several weeks, Mr. Roosevelt, to have Mr. Dubinsky remove his name from your list of electors.

"How much longer do you need?

"Why are you delaying?"

'NICK OF TIME' SAYS CURLEY OF JOB FUND

Predictions that the New Deal would dump funds into Massachusetts in an effort to stem the Landon tide came true today.

More than $20,000,000 was awarded this state for roadside beautification, sidewalks in isolated country sections and other projects this afternoon.

With the election only a little over a month away, these projects will be started as soon as possible, under orders from Washington.

Governor Curley asserted that the donation had come "in the nick of time," when he made announcement of the allotment of funds by National Works Progress Administrator Harry Hopkins.

At the same time State Administrator Paul Edwards said he had received word from Washington that President Roosevelt had approved Massachusetts projects totaling $36,830,469.

43 ON LIST

The $20,000,000 allotment of cash will be applied to these projects:

In the Presidents list are 43 projects for tree-planting, shrubsetting and other roadside landscaping, for a total of $10,253,925.

There are 43 more projects for sidewalks along state highways, totaling $13,657,484, and 31 general highway projects, totaling $11,945,660. There are also five white-collar projects a total of $1,013,400.

John D'Isso, 25, son of a wealthy Salem real estate operater, struck his wife on the chin in Salem Probate Court, today knocking her unconsciousness while with their attorneys they were grouped about Judge B. Sears in a bench conference.

DEAL ROBS FARMERS OF MARKETS, LANDON CHARGES

G. O. P. WILL AID PRODUCTION, GOVERNOR DECLARES

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Aboard Governor Landon's Sunflower Special, Sept. 24—The Roosevelt program of scarcity has robbed the American farmer "not only of his former export markets but even of his home market," Governor Alfred M. Landon declared today to a "rear porch" audience at Nevada, Iowa.

The Republican nominee, en route to Minneapolis to assail the administration's foreign trade policies, declared the Republican Party "stands for production; not destruction." He warned that American democracy could survive only through cooperation with the farmers, not by coercion."

Landon called attention to a government statistical report of last Saturday, revealing that 2,750,000 bushels of Argentine corn had been imported last week with 2,000,000 bushels more on the way here.

IOWA CRIBS EMPTY

He said these imports of corn—while Iowa corn cribs were nearly empty—is a sample of the way the present administration has aided the farmers of the best corn producing area on earth.

"It has distressed me this morning in traveling across your state," said Landon, "to see empty cribs and granaries when they should be filled to overflowing. In part, the situation is due to the distressing drouth.

"But another reason for your empty corn cribs—and don't forget this—is the program of scarcity of a year ago. There are always some years of plenty, or of surplus, as we have come to call it in recent years. But we are equally certain to have some years of shortage. Had the farmers of Iowa and of every other agricultural state been allowed to produce as long experience dictated, they would have been prepared to meet the tragedy of this year.

ROB U. S. FARMERS

"The effects of this scarcity program go far beyond this year. They are robbing the American farmer not only of his former export markets but even of his home markets."

In proof of his charge, Landon cited the import statistics of the U. S. Bureau of Agriculture Economics. With millions of bushels of Argentine corn coming in, the country Landon pointed to the empty Iowa corn cribs.

"The chief function of the government is to help the farmer produce," he added, "and to finance the carry-over crops for such situations as this report on the importation of Argentine corn discloses. That is exactly what the Republican Party will do. Our party stands for production; not destruction. It is for cooperation with the farmer; not coercion. If our democracy is to survive, that is the only way."

G. O. P. Noonday Rally Center Opens

LEGION ASKS U. S. TO WAR ON REDS

Cleveland, Sept. 24—Firm declarations, demanding withdrawal of America's recognition of Soviet Russia and calling on President Roosevelt to investigate Communistic propaganda and activity in the United States were unanimously adopted by the American Legion's 18th national convention.

The latter resolution also called for participation in the investigation by the attorney-general's office, under which the G-men of the Department of Justice work.

Resolutions against Communism and federal relief aid to aliens were coupled with declarations for increased man power and funds for national defense in the program adopted by the Legion.

New York City was selected as the convention city for 1937 and the Legion dedicated its forthcoming year of activity to American-ism.

KANSAN NEW COMMANDER

The Legion elected Harry W. Colmery, 48, a lawyer of Topeka, Kan., as its national commander for the coming year.

Colmery dedicated himself and his Legion administration to what he called a real peace program, a program that, he emphasized, recognized the dual responsibility of the federal government and the individual to maintain dignified might and power of this country.

"A program of real peace," he told reporters, "is entirely in accord with the program of the Legion. The Legion's program—universal service, adequate defense and neutrality—is leading toward a real and permanent basis for peace."

URGE DRAFT LAW

Bluntly declaring the present international situation carries grave portent to all nations, the American Legion today adopted as the principal measure of a vigorous legislative program, a resolution calling on Congress to enact a universal draft law.

Veterans attending final sessions of the legion convention roared approval.

The Legionnaires adopted with equal enthusiasm, recommendations of its foreign relations committee calling on this government to adopt a strictly neutral policy, and to immediately seek payment of the war debts, without further reduction or any cancellations.

Another resolution condemned the so-called "Black Legion" as lawless and unAmerican.

More than a dozen other proposals were included in the report of the legislative committees, each of them dealing with liberalization of legislation giving benefits to veterans.

The Legion's patriotic program—worded in the strongest terms so far employed by any Legion convention and loudly cheered by the assembled vets—included the following as major resolutions:

1—Reiteration of the Legion's platform against Communism and every subversive influence.
2—A declaration that the President and the attorney-general be urged to investigate the activities of "all those disseminating and propagating subversive doctrine."
3—Demand that the federal government employ only American citizens on relief projects and find aliens ineligible for loans from the Home Owners Loan Corporation.
4—Deportation proposed for any alien Communist or Anarchist or who has been convicted of felony, including violations of immigration laws.
5—Increased border patrols to prevent illegal entry of aliens.
6—Reduction of present immigration quotas by 90 per cent.

Cleveland, Sept. 24 (AP)—Color and noise slowly seeped away from the Cleveland crowds after the last great fanfare of American Legion trumpeters at the drum and bugle corps contest, which ended early today.

First award went to Commonwealth Edison Post Corps of Chicago, the tropical helmeted musicians rating 95.775 points to displace Sun Gabriel, Calif., last year's champions, who scored 95.55 this year.

Henry Houston Post of Philadelphia was third with 95.425, and Marlboro, Mass., fourth with 95.125.

Weak Substitute for Logic

President Flays Prejudice

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 24 (US)—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's radio Herald-Tribune forum address:

Anything that makes for tolerance of opinion and contributes to the general education of our people in the issues of governmental policy is of vast value.

Therefore I like the forum idea. May we have more of them and cover the country with them.

It is not likely that such a brief expression of a point of view as is possible on such an occasion as this will persuade the convinced political partisan to change his or her position, but it may start such people to thinking and convey the idea that prejudice is a rather weak substitute for logic in determining the questions that are of such vital consequence to our country as a whole and to each individual citizen thereof.

It is natural, I suppose, in a campaign year, for advocates and adversaries of any policy of process of government to relapse into exaggeration and invective, and so becloud the controversy as to make it possible for the future of the country to be determined in rancor and temper instead of by calm deliberation and clear thinking.

I don't know that there is any actual remedy for this state of affairs, but I believe it is within the power and the province of the press to make whatever improvement is possible.

NEWS POLICIES

I do not think anybody objects to a statement of opinion or an argument, either pro or con, being put forth in the editorial pages provided the editorials do not contain mis-statements of fact. That, unless I entirely misunderstand newspaper psychology, is what the newspaper editorial columns are for.

I do not believe—and I do not think any disagreement is possible on this subject—that a journal's news columns ought to be hampered with, either by coloring news or by leaving out news. The news is the commodity that is marketed to the whole people.

I may be accused of idealism when I suggest that a Republican reader of a Democratic newspaper is entitled to al the news that appears in this segment of the political landscape and that a Democratic reader of a Republican newspaper should not be fed exclusively on a Republican diet, and I would apply the same idealism to the headlines.

The forum idea, conducted impartially, is an indication of the objective which most fair-minded people seek. I cannot help but contrast a nation which more and more is encouraging any friendly discussion on all manner of public problems with those countries which unfortunately have made public discussions difficult if not impossible.

In the welter of passion which is apparently still inseparable from our political campaigns, you and I hear about the liberty of the press —regimentation of the press against the government and regimentation of the press by the government.

It is doubtful if the United States ever had an administration since the days when Washington was accused of despotism and aspirations to kingship that had the slightest desire to muzzle anybody.

RELIEF MONEY

The unchecked virulence of assaults on almost every administration since the beginning of our history in itself is best proof of that statement.

An old friend of mine who although a successful man of affairs in New York, has led a somewhat narrow existence, asked me the other day if it was true, as many of his friends had told him, that three-quarters of all the money spent for relief of the needy unemployed in these past few years had gone for overhead and only one-quarter to the needy unemployed themselves.

He asked me further if it was true, as he had been told by his friends, that all our bank deposits were insecure and our insurance policies worthless.

CONSTRUCTIVE REMEDIES

I wrote him that it would be best for him to look up the answers himself. I suggested that he attend your forum yesterday and today. I hope he has been with you.

The time may come when the policies of the nation will be determined with a serenity and logic that any serious business problem is decided among the directors of the business, but I must reluctantly confess that we have not reached that day.

I wish I might have attended the forum in person. If I had been with you, I might have been moved to take part in the discussion.

My part, in that case, would at least have been tempered by good humor, an effort to develop the facts and a desire to present constructive remedies for current ills.

I send to you my compliments and good wishes.

Landon Urges U. S. to Halt Reckless Experimentation

New York, Sept. 24 (US)—The two chief opponents of the fall election, President Roosevelt and Governor Alfred M. Landon, briefly stated their cases from the same rostrum before 3800 persons in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

The audience, attending the final session of the Herald-Tribune forum on current problems, heard the President over the radio, broadcasting from the library of his home in Hyde Park.

Governor Landon sent the following message from Des Moines, Iowa.

Your chairman very kindly invited me to speak to you today personally or by radio.

To my greatest regret other engagements in Iowa and Minnesota have prevented my accepting the invitation.

I would like, however, to give you my greetings and to say a word in tribute to those whose work in cooperation has made possible the success of the New York Herald-Tribune forum.

In these troubled days, when established systems of government are being overthrown in many nations of the world and when our own traditions are being questioned, the women of America are faced with great responsibilities.

These they are meeting, as they have always met them.

They must help in making the great national decisions that affect so vitally not only their own welfare, but the welfare of their children.

PROTECT UNEMPLOYED

A high degree of public understanding of the meaning of our constitutional right to freedom of religion, freedom of education, freedom of speech and a free press is essential to the continuation of pure liberalism.

Within the past few years the number of countries in which these rights exist have been reduced by fewer. This trend is directly opposed to the progress of true liberalism.

With the tide toward race prejudice and absolutism abroad in the world, it is important that we jealously guard our freedom in these respects.

A democracy cannot live in the dark. Only tyranny and absolutism can proceed under the shadow of the cowl. This must never be forgotten.

The delegates to your Herald-Tribune forum are a representative and public-spirited group of Americans.

You have the practical experience in family budget-making and know the right and wrong of national budget-making.

You have the generosity and warmth of heart to see that the human side of government and the unemployed are cared for.

WASTE INEXCUSABLE

In talking to you tonight I shall not discuss any topics on which I feel deeply. The first is the issue of waste and extravagance.

When the New Deal was launched originally to meet an emergency, all Americans were glad to cooperate.

We were ready to excuse mistakes due to urgent haste and necessary experimentation.

We are more concerned today in the fact that waste and extravagance and the reckless experimentation that initiated have been fastened upon Washington as the habitual thriftlessness of a prodigal instead of even-expanding but reasonable.

We Republicans are glad to express the sympathy we have for the aims of the present administration.

But when we reach the ways and means, the hard practical details, the problems of day by day administration, the practical results, the nuts-and-bolts of you will, that we Americans, both Republican and Democrat, part company with the New Deal.

In this world there can be no escape from the hard facts of arithmetic and experience.

As prosperity under the pressure of economic waste gradually returns, the revenues of the government quickly go up. But so also go the expenses of the government.

That is the most damning fact about the present administration.

The costs are traveling in the wrong direction. Unless they are reversed, we can never balance the budget or reduce taxes. Both these are essential to our national stability and prosperity.

If I am elected, I shall reverse that trend immediately without injury to the worthwhile functions of government or injustice to the needy unemployed.

I am thinking not only of the heavy burden of the still-climbing direct and hidden taxes. I am thinking not only of the perils of the financial stability of the nation—and of each of us—in this spendthrift policy. I am thinking quite as much of the coming generations — of your children and mine—who will have to pay the bills for this generation. Is this fair?

The other aspect of the New Deal I would stress is the narrow nationalism in its planned economy.

I do not believe this narrowness of outlook is good economics. Nor does it make for social justice or higher standards of life.

You women of America love your country and you want it to go forward as America, free from foreign entanglement and true to its great past. Yet you care as deeply for world peace.

You are therefore against the narrow type of nationalism that would plan the economic forces and direct the lives of the people of this country as America cannot exist safely and self-contained without foreign trade or any other responsibility abroad.

I know that such narrow nationalism tends to convert the nations of the world into armed camps.

The ideals of the present administration are fair to listen to. But when the President turned his back on the London economic conference in 1933 he set back the cause of peace by many years. I am for that economic co-operation with other nations which will fully protect America's interest. I pledge practical support for the peaceful settlement of international disputes through arbitration and negotiation.

Weymouth WPA Error Described

Mrs. Margaret Connolly of Dorchester street, South Boston, victor in a fight against Works Progress Administration when it trespassed on her private property in Weymouth, will describe the project at the meeting of the ... of selectmen at Weymouth next Monday night.

The WPA had to cease work of laying water pipes on St. Margaret's street when they found after spending a considerable amount they had trespassed on a private way.

This despite the fact a large sign reading "Private Way" is posted at the head of the road.

If the WPA had followed correct procedure and procured the permission of the property owner, Mrs. Connolly, in the first place, there would be no difficulty today, she told a Boston Evening American reporter.

Mrs. Connolly stated:

"I voiced my objection against the throwing of dirt upon my garden. I did not object to the laying of the water pipes. That is not the core of the argument.

"However, speaking of the water-pipes, of course, the WPA are doing things in their usual inadequate manner. They are laying summer pipes of a two-inch diameter instead of the six-inch diameter winter pipe called for.

"In objecting to the throwing of the dirt, I received nothing but impertinence from the men.

"I want the situation to be thoroughly understood so I shall state my case before the board of selectmen of Weymouth next Monday night."

Roosevelt's Red Support

And what does the White House statement say?

"The President does not want and does not welcome the vote or support of any individual or group taking orders from alien sources."

WELL, HE'S GOT IT.

And what has he done to deserve it?

He still keeps the Red Tugwell, close to him—the Tugwell who says "We must draw together, nursing the sources of that anger which has driven us forward;" that the coming campaign "may very well determine whether, some years from now, we shall do as other nations have—throw over completely the Democratic process;" and t a. "Our best strategy is to surge forward with the workers and the farmers of this nation . . . trusting the genius of our leader for the disposition of our forces and the timing of our attacks."

Has Tugwell been dismissed as Assistant Secretary of Agriculture? No.

Has he been reproved? No.

DO HIS words express anything but Russian Communist doctrine, Communist planning, Communist designs?

Of course not!

And so with Richberg, exultantly exclaiming, "The revolution is not coming—it is here."

The President has been strangely silent since THE PROOFS of his Communist support have been made public.

Nor does any word come from Farley, the none too astute, as to the inclusion of Dubinsky and Hillman, the supporters of Communist activities, on New York's ballot as ROOSEVELT ELECTORS.

Berlin, Sept. 24 (INS)—With the assertion that "Germany has conquered the depression," official figures were released today showing that industrial production now equals the 1929 prosperity peak, and unemployment is actually below the 1929 level.

Expose of Deal's Red Aid Praised by Col. Donovan

Special to American Newspapers, Inc.

Los Angeles, Sept. 24—Col. William J. Donovan, noted soldier and brilliant attorney, today declared the Roosevelt administration is a springboard for Communist activations in the United States."

Former Lieutenant Governor Lansing J. Brown of Ohio declared William Randolph Hearst's revelations of Communist support of President Roosevelt would arouse the American people.

Both Donovan and Brown, who are touring the west with Colonel Frank Knox, gave statements to the Los Angeles Examiner commending Mr. Hearst's editorial published Monday, and declared the proofs offered in the form of Earl Bowder's report to the comintern at Moscow were damning.

CALLED SPRINGBOARD

"President Roosevelt's form of administration constitutes a springboard for Communistic activations in the United States."

Such was the declaration of Colonel Donovan, former Assistant Attorney-General of the United States. He added:

"The American people should be made sharply aware of the fact that the Communists are looking upon the Roosevelt campaign for reelection as a Heaven-sent rallying point for their own ends.

"In bringing this vital situation out into the open, Mr. William Randolph Hearst has performed a service of inestimable value to his fellow-citizens."

INDICTS ADMINISTRATION

"One of the most damning indictments ever drawn by the court of public opinion against a national administration."

Illustrations did Mr. Brown approve Mr. Hearst's editorial calling attention to the pronounced approval with which the Communists in the United States and in Russia have indorsed President Roosevelt's campaign for re-election.

"I predict that Mr. Hearst's revelations will arouse the American people to the danger which confronts them as free men and free women.

"This, in my opinion, is a real service to his fellow citizens which is a credit to the credit of Mr. Hearst in larger measure as the campaign proceeds."

Styles Chosen For Fall

Fashion Congress Selects Modes for Early Autumn

In buying your fall wardrobe let the Fashion Congress be your guide!

Newest fashion ideas, combined with standards of good taste generations old, were the basis for sage advice about Fall, 1936 clothes expressed at yesterday's session in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

Here's a fashion guide for autumn which resulted from the stimulating discussion which took place yesterday.

Consider the new grays, warm and vibrant at last, with their subtle overtones of color, particularly if in plum or the inclusive vintage hues. A refreshing change from the severe and blacks of previous autumns.

Perhaps you'd like one of the new flattering greys in a tailored coat, an watch for the new treatment of caracul—supple as a fabric and handled with the utmost finesse. Favored until the newest season.

Broadcloth, Too

Have at least one dress with an accent of metallic fabric, perhaps in a softly gleaming blouse of a contrast suit.

Don't overlook the importance of headwear in everything from evening dresses to daytime suits. A headdress, for example, has caused a number of admiration yesterday.

Consider the peasant trend, as in bandeaing in bright colors, embroidery in gold and cavalcaded folds. Picture yourself in a wide-skirted peasant dress suddenly become a teatime frock in French blue and black.

If you're young and mother says you're not old enough for an all-black costume, tell her the Fashion Congress jurors are on your side. Black, so particularly significant this fall, is perfectly permissible for a young girl if she is careful to choose a youthful silhouette and detail.

So you can be a sophisticated lady all in black, even if you're only 14 years old. Up until now, the accent has been focused on capes for New York and the Continent.

Think seriously of the glitter of sequins, another important fashion detail. While sequins glistening on velvet suits at ceremonial times were used on the blouse of a dinner dress in one of yesterday's costumes.

Crazy Hats

Have at least one braid trimmed hat.

Wear hats that soar crazily but unstintingly.

Buy an elaborately simple dress with its charm depending on texture interest alone.

Don't ever be pretentious in your clothes. Capes, for instance, at least attention as be sure that your cape is of the type that will attract the attention it will attract. If you can't have a cape perfect in fabric and line, don't wear one at all.

In other words, the judges said, don't ever seem to be something you can't afford to be.

Yesterday's fashion jury was headed by Mrs T. Barnet Plimpton, socially prominent Brookline matron.

The other jurors were: Mrs. Erskine L. Ballard, Brookline; Countess M. H. Pasetti, Brookline; Mrs. F. A. Pemberton, Brookline; Miss Amy M. Sacker, Boston; Mrs. F. Jenkins, Brookline; Mrs. Robert P. Kelley, Chestnut Hill; Mrs. C. C. Hewitt, Boston; Mrs. Russell Sturgis, Brookline; Mrs. Albert Kales, Boston, and Mrs. Ralph Pope.

Lovely Mannequins

Lee Stevenson, beautiful and stately young socialite who has begun a successful career of professional modeling in New York, was one of the pretty mannequins.

Betsy Prescott, pretty debutante, capably modeled the clothing intended for Sally Scudder, who was unable to be present.

The other lovely mannequins were Blanche O'Riordan and Doris Poland.

Miss Annice Brink, fashion editor of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser, led the fashion discussion and acted as commentator, explaining the rules and judges the aims and methods of the Fashion Congress.

Photographs of the ensembles which won tags of approval will be published daily in the pages of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser.

The stores which exhibited clothes yesterday were Jordan Marsh Company, R. H. White, Jordan Marsh Company, R. H. White, Lamson & Hubbard, Plotkin Brothers, Kennedy's, Woman's Shop, Coleman's Fashion Store, R. H. Williams, formerly Manahan, E. T. Slattery Company and Theodore, Inc.

MISS BETTY PRESCOTT COUNTESS M. H. PASETTI MRS. ALBERT KALES

Where is the woman who doesn't love to try on a new hat? Fashion Congress jurors enjoy it, too. Countess M. H. Pasetti, seated above, is trying on one of the hats modeled at yesterday's session, as Mrs. Albert Kales, another juror, holds the mirror. Miss Betty Prescott, left, was one of the pretty mannequins.

Fog Halts Shipping, Forecast New Gale for N. E.

White waves of ocean fog enveloped outside Boston harbor because of a thick fog storm warnings were hoisted along the New England coast today as a tropical hurricane moved northward and was expected to strike this section before midnight.

Maritime circles expressed the fear that the fog might not lift in time for the big ocean liners to sail port before the gale struck.

Weather Bureau identified the storm as being 350 miles east southeast of Atlantic City, N. J., and moving directly northeast about 20 miles per hour.

All vessels in the path of the raging gale were advised to proceed with caution. Small craft along the New England coast were warned to remain in port today.

No large vessels are scheduled to dock here until Saturday night, but many were grouped over the fog choked shore along the coast.

One vessel, the Panama, Transport Line Co. ait tanker Leda, after leaving the Colonial Beacon Oil Co. refinery in Everett, ran aground on a flat just off Castle Island.

She had 39 members of the crew and Captain Herman Gerken aboard.

Concern was expressed over the Eastern Steamship liner New York which was forced to anchor at the Buzzard's Bay end of the Cape Cod Canal. She was be delayed for hours before reaching her Boston berth.

Although 13 vessels were due in Boston today, only two arrived. The Cape Cod canal has been closed to shipping since 10 o'clock last night because of the fog.

EDWARD Lives Simple LIFE

KING WELCOMES U. S. VISITORS

Aberdeen, Scotland, Sept. 24 (AP)—Zestful King Edward VIII roamed the Scottish highlands today like a feudal lord.

He came and went when, where and how he pleased, having cast off the fetters of royal pomp and tradition for his three-week holiday at Balmoral castle.

Edward, it was said, had swept aside "the last vestige of Victorianism" in his hill retreat.

He astonished station crowds yesterday when he greeted his guests—among them Mrs. Ernest Simpson and Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Rogers, American friends of the monarch—as the overnight train from London arrived.

The king came down out of the hills wearing the colorful plaids of the Scotch Tartan and the gay Balmoral.

The monarch discontinued the formality of assembling clansmen for his arrival at Balmoral, one of the picturesque rites which greeted the late King George V when he came to Scotland for his fall vacation.

But Edward retained another—the ceremonial of the bagpipes. Edward not only has retained his musicians but also has instructed them what tunes to pipe and occasionally takes their pipes in hand to show them the royal taste.

Simplicity and vigor are his rule. Instead of a carefully planned routine he prefers spur-of-the-moment decisions.

He spent yesterday stalking stag with camera and gun on an expedition into the hills with his brothers, the Dukes of York, Gloucester and Kent.

Instead of the grandeur of his father's bedroom, Edward has taken a much smaller one, formerly the quarters of a member of the castle staff. The royal bedroom will become a guest room.

The stables are almost empty of horses which once pulled regal carriages—Edward prefers a fast automobile. The staff of household servants has been cut in half.

'Dead' Girl's Own Story

Home From Grave

ANNA RITA CONLEY

Her Name Is on the Headstone

Anna Rita Conley, 18-year-old Albany, N. Y., girl, told the Boston Evening American today by telephone how it feels to return to life after having been legally dead for three years.

"It gave me the shivers when my mother told me a fire victim had been identified as me and buried under my name," she said. "I thought of all the things, like being burned to death, that might have happened to me while I was away from home. I was pretty foolish to go away. I was only 15 at the time.

"I never know a thing about the burying of that other girl under my name. Even poor mother identified her as me.

"I got work in New York and everything was all right, going from one job to another, in the different stores, until I lost my job and couldn't get another.

"What do people do when they're in trouble? They write home and that's what I did. I certainly was homesick.

"Poor mother was overjoyed but also greatly shocked. I asked her to put an ad in a paper, if she had forgiven me for leaving home, or if she wanted to, to meet me in front of the Roxy Theater on Sept. 14.

"She sent me and then she told me about the poor girl who had been burned to death in Pittsfield way back in December, 1933, and was buried in St. Agnes Cemetery in Albany.

"They thought that girl was me and my name is on the headstone. Well, no wonder I got the shivers.

"It will be three years next November since I left home. Now I'm going to stay here. Mother is going to attend to the insurance and try to pay back what the company paid, the $2000 for my supposed death."

Pittsfield police had always held the theory that the girl killed in the flames which swept the Union Block in that city was Mary Burns of Syracuse, N. Y., but the authorities have not definitely determined the identity of the nameless corpse that Mrs. Michael Conley thought was her foster daughter.

'JILTED' GIRL WANTS $40,000

Worcester, Sept. 24—Apparently unconcerned over a threat of a $40,000 breach of promise suit by Miss Vera Pitchard, 32, of Grafton, Raymond A. Cassett, 34, was honeymooning today.

Cassett was married in a brilliant ceremony at her Terrace drive home to Mrs. Frances L. Legg, 29, after which they went to celebrate at a night club.

While the ceremony was being performed Miss Pitchard was at home playing cards with neighbors.

It was believed Miss Pritchard, who claims she was jilted after being courted eight years by Cassett, planned to visit the night club attended by the married couple. She decided against it, however.

As to her change of mind, Miss Pritchard told reporters:

"Because of what happened it could not have been in good taste to go there. And it certainly would have done no good."

The nuptials were happy, but temporarily marred at one time when Cassett displayed a bit of temperament upon discovering newspapermen present. After ordering them out of the house, he changed his mind. Later he even posed for pictures with his bride.

The only other embarrassing interruption came when the minister, the Rev. Dr. George E. Heath, failed to arrive on schedule. The hitch that settled over the guests soon changed to a happy feeling when he arrived a short time later, however.

After the night club visit, the couple left in an auto for a week's honeymoon to an unannounced destination.

Washington have been prophesying the New Deal's money bags would be opened, and cash poured into Massachusetts as the election drew near.

As far as Massachusetts is concerned, waived the requirement that to be eligible for Federal aid a man or woman must have been on municipal welfare rolls. This requirement, which barred many worth unemployed from Federal relief jobs, resulting many heads of families, was a regulation which the stressed civilians hated to dislodge in the past.

WORK FOR ALL IDLE

"It will be possible to provide work for anyone out of employment," said Governor Curley. "Our work quota is to be 100,000. I had hoped it would be 120,000."

The Governor appeared elated as he made the announcement and said the funds had been apportioned "in this state in the nick of time," explaining he referred to the approach of winter.

He said:

"This appropriation comes in the nick of time. Winter months are not far away and our need for employment during such times is imperative. I am glad that Mr. Roosevelt gave us his approval at this time."

Jean, whose height militated against a movie career back in 1926 cut out on the West Coast, is a native of Trinidad but was brought up in Boston.

A younger sister, Marian Marsh of the screen, is in the movies as a result of Jean's training, and there also is a brother who is at Columbia studios under the name Gene Morgan.

Tall and slim, Jean was turned down 10 years ago, but now her height is proving an asset.

DOROTHY STONE TO WED HERE SATURDAY

Mr. Payson Miller, rector of the Wayland Church, which is also known as the First Parish Meeting House of Wayland.

Dorothy, who will be presented in marriage by her father, will have three bridesmaids, Emmeline Warner, daughter of the Irving Warners; Muriel, Van Duseen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis H. Van Dusen, and Elizabeth Marston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Crosfield Marston, who is not to be confused with our own Elisabeth Marston, now the wife of "Bob" Revel.

BROTHER BEST MAN

Ludlow W. Stevens, who is married to one of the late Jay Gould's daughters, is to be his brother's best man, and the guests will be seated by an impressive group of young club fellows, including B. Pendleton Rogers, whose father, Henry Pendleton Rogers, met such a tragic death some months ago; Joseph H. Choate, 3rd, bearer of famous cognomen; Theodore Chase, Acosta Nichols, Jr., whose family is identified with Oyster Bay; L. I.; Stanford Whitney, Jr., and John W. Goodrich, of Boston.

Dorothy, if I recall correctly, made her debut about five years ago, and is a member of Boston's exclusive Vincent Club and also of the Junior League.

Those who insist they know tell me her romance with young Mr. Stevens had its inception when the latter was a student at Harvard. He was a member of the class of '34 and prepared for his college career at Groton—which accounts for the fact that Dr. Peabody will tie the nuptial knot next Saturday.

After their honeymoon, the young couple plan to live up in Cambridge, Mass.

Handcuffed To Table, She Tells Court

Her husband, Elverton P. Merrill, 34, handcuffed her to the kitchen table with his grandfather's handcuffs and locked her from the bedroom at night, Mrs. Mary Merrill told Judge Elbridge C. Davis in Malden district court today.

Mrs. Merrill, in relating the marital strife that led to her being attached to the furniture stated that her husband had worked up "a peeve" because he believed she had taken his keys, which she denied.

Mrs. Merrill told Judge Davis that her husband suddenly sneaked up on her one night in the bathroom and before she could raise a hand in self-defense he had snapped a pair of antiquated handcuffs to her wrists.

She then chirped that he hauled her through the house protesting and finally hooked one "cuff" around the leg of the kitchen table.

Judge Davis asked the husband if he had anything to say to all this. Merrill shook his head negatively. Judge Davis give him a sentence of two months in the House of Correction, then suspended the sentence until 1938.

CURLEY TELLS OF ESCAPE IN AUTO CRASH

at the casino in Fall River after which there was a reception at the Hotel Mellen.

OTHER CAR SPEEDS ON

"Governor Green of Rhode Island and James Roosevelt were other speakers.

"We rounded a sharp curve about 50 yards from the scene of the accident, and we saw the other machine bearing down on us at 60 miles an hour.

"It was obvious the other driver had lost his head. He swung over on the wrong side of the road.

"Joe Copperath did everything possible to avoid a collision. He slowed down as much as possible and got over to the right side of the road as much as he could, but the other fellow kept coming right for us.

"If the crash had been headon the impact would have been terrific and the result disastrous.

"A collision could not be avoided entirely. Our car hit the right rear mudguard of the other machine. The front of our car was smashed in, as the mudguard was crushed and the front axle broken.

"We were shaken up but not injured. I want to reassure everybody that we were shaken up at the time. I feel fine now and will be on the job as usual today."

Fall River reporters, first on the scene, said Ferreira assumed blame, saying he had tried to pass a truck.

Inspector O'Connor said he would recommend that the man's driving license be suspended. Ferreira has had a license for only one month.

OFFICIAL REPORT

Goodwin, following release of an official statement on the accident made by Inspector O'Connor, said:

"If any charges are preferred against the driver of the car that crashed into the Governor's car, they will be made by an inspector from the registrar's office."

Inspector O'Connor's report read: "Investigation shows that Ferreira was going south on Somerset avenue, Dighton, Route 138, at a speed of 35 to 40 miles an hour. Car S-1 was going north on Somerset avenue, a slight upgrade and slight curve, at a speed of 35 to 40 miles an hour. Ferreira was following another car also going south and pulled to his left to pass it just on the brow of a slight hill when his view was obstructed by the curve.

"He suddenly saw S-1 and, seeing he could not get back into line, he whipped sharp left to avoid a head-on collision. The operator of S-1 applied his brakes and Ferreira shot by, damaging the right-hand side of S-1, and right hand side of his own car. Masterro, riding with Ferreira, received slight injuries."

HEAD AND BACK INJURED

Ferreira was scratched about the face, but otherwise uninjured. Masterro suffered head, back and leg injuries.

Henry Lawlor, who was with the Governor, is legal adviser to the Democratic State Committee. Frank Kane is one of the Governor's secretaries in charge of State employment. Copperath lives on Calumet street, Roxbury.

The state car was so badly damaged that it had to be towed to Boston. The other car was towed to Fall River.

State Senator Joseph A. Langone, who was following in another car, took Coppenrath to the Dighton station to report the accident, and while there told a reporter that Governor Curley was not in the S-1 car at the time of the crash.

LANGONE "COVERS UP"

Governor Curley spoke frankly about the accident to reporters after arriving at his Jamaicaway home, to which he went in another automobile.

The Governor having left the scene, Senator Langone took charge. He was surrounded by a group of men, two of whom tried to prevent photographs of the wrecked automobiles. The number plates of the damaged state car were removed before the machine was towed to Boston under an escort led by Langone.

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin said the case would take an ordinary course after a report was received.

He asserted that he could not see why special emphasis should be put on this case, considering the far more serious accidents which have resulted in the deaths of seven children in Massachusetts in 24 hours.

"CHILDREN MORE VITAL"

"I am sick and tired of bitter, partisan, political wrangling and criticism over such cases," he said. "I wish the Republicans and Democrats both would attend to their politics and let this department alone.

"The deaths of those seven small children, killed on Massachusetts streets and highways, is far more worthy of headlines in the newspapers, and of the attention and concern of the public, than an accident resulting in no serious injuries but happening to involve a political figure."

Today's accident was the third since Governor Curley took office nearly two years ago, involving the Governor, his official car or his escort.

On May 12, 1935, as he was being escorted home from a memorial service, a motorcycle patrolman, Daniel A. McCallum, who was clearing the way for the governor's car, swerved into a tree and was killed.

On July 4 of the same year a state policeman, John W. Noon, who was escorting the Governor's car, was seriously injured in Newton when he attempted to avoid another car.

Knickerbocker Describes Battle for Toledo

have left nothing but a mighty crater.

But today I could see plainly the outlines of the Alcazar still there. The distance was too great to determine details, but my Spanish companion insisted the principal tower and walls were still intact.

EXPLOSIONS FAIL

The mine took over a month of arduous work to lay in the tunnel, which for size and depth could not compare with a fair-sized coal mine shaft. Now that it has been exploded another mine can't be tunneled in less than another month.

Today it appeared a certainty the Legion will be in Toledo long before any such period has expired.

In fact, the officers here speak of a "few days or a week" as the probable time it will take to cover the eighteen miles and storm the city.

Most eager of all officers here to be present for the capture of Toledo is Juan Jose Botana, captain and cavalry instructor in the military academy of the Alcazar.

ONLY 38 CADETS THERE

I met Botana here. He corrected some misconceptions which had arisen about the deseiged garrison in the Alcazar, whose heroism has attracted the admiration and sympathy of the world.

Botana said there were not more than 36 actual cadets imprisoned there at the outbreak of the civil war because it was vacation time and most of the young men were home.

Then the captain believes there must have been at least 1500 defenders, made up of instructors and their families plus a large group of civil guards and assault guards from Toledo, also a few civilians from the city who had taken refuge in the Alcazar from the violence of the Reds.

There is not the slightest doubt in the minds of any soldiers on this front but that they will reach Toledo very soon. One young officer told me:

"I hope to get my next bath in Toledo."

ALCAZAR'S MIRACLE FIGHT

They are all delighted the defenders of the Alcazar refused either to surrender themselves on promise of the Reds to spare their lives or to send out their women and children at request of the Chilean ambassador.

The fact the Alcazar is so near Madrid that the Red army can hurl every available reserve against it and daily bomb it from an airfield just a few miles away makes continued desistance of the fortress all the more remarkable.

The Writes feel the fall of Toledo and relief of the Alcazar will mark collapse of the Red morale which Col. Juan Yague, head of all the legion columns of the Madrid front assured me with apparent sincerity was already crumbling.

Reds Push Rebels Back To Recapture Key Town

By THOMAS A. LOAYZA

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Santa Cruz De Retamar, General Headquarters of the Spanish Loyalists, Sept. 24 (INS)—A loyal column marching against Magueda this morning recaptured the village of Quismondo, six kilometers from Magueda, the Rebels evacuating without fighting.

When the International News Quismondo the enemy had retreat- Service Correspondent drove into ed to within two kilometres of Magueda under a Loyalist cannonade. The range was measured carefully as the Loyal advance guard was within machine-gun reach of the Rebels.

I went beyond the guns which were firing an average of eighteen shells a minute and reached a point two kilometers beyond, where the machine guns of the Loyalists could be distinctly heard.

The enemy was shelling from a considerable distance but I could hear both enemy and Loyalist shells traveling high above.

My car was forced to turn back at this point. If the offensive now under way and the attempt to cut the line of rebel communications are successful, Loyalist Commander Colonel Juan Asensio is confident he will be able to inflict disastrous defeat upon the insurgente.

Reds Flood Country, Try to Drown Rebels

Madrid, Sept. 24—Desperately sacrificing fertile farmlands and imperilling the lives of many noncombatants, the Leftist forces defending Madrid against the steady, unrelenting rebel drive from the west and southwest today suddenly smashed levees along the Alberche river, releasing more than 10,000,000 cubic yards of furiously flowing water in a titanic effort to wash out the victorious insurgents.

Emulating the futile tactics of the Belgians of 1914 who flooded great sections of the country to impede the German advance, the Spanish Loyalists turned to the "attack by water."

Their large but poorly equipped forces had failed repeatedly to stem the advance of the smaller but more efficient rebel armies in the Alberche and Tagus river valleys.

As the levees along the Alberche banks were smashed, great walls of water rushed foaming down the valley with tremendous force, washing out all before it.

Bridges were carried away like matchwood, and this was one of the main objectives of the unusual attack. The bridges, the Leftists believed, are indispensable to the rebel attack.

The grave decision to destroy the levees, which hold the high waters of the river within bounds at this season, was taken after government planes reported the insurgents had concentrated a large amount of war material and artillery on low ground near the Tagus river, which the Alberche joins.

The water went swirling down the Alberche valley and into the Tagus valley, directly to where the rebel armies were reported located.

Result of the sacrificial attack was not learned immediately, but it was believed considerable damage was done, especially to the insurgent supplies. The rebel advance was believed to have been given an impetus and check, which, even if only temporary, would aid the Loyalists in consolidating themselves in new positions after serious defeats in this area during the past ten days.

Reds Hurl Dynamite, But Rebels Still Hold On

(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.)

Toledo, Sept. 24 — Dust-choked government militiamen, organized into dynamite-throwing squads, battled today in crush doggedly-resisting Fascists inside the ruined Alcazar.

I climbed up the ruins of the south-east tower and watched the slowly-advancing Socialists hurl bundles of dynamite sticks at the embattled insurgents.

The way was prepared for the militiamen by a heavy artillery barrage.

As soon as the cannonade ceased, the Socialist formations advanced to blow the Fascists out of their war-torn havens.

The insurgents swarmed into the upper section of the battered south and east sides of the fortress and raked the advancing government ranks with fire of machine gun fire. The ruins shook with the crash of explosions and in the ruins a "hoo-quarter" sniping contest filled the air with flying bullets.

For the first time in almost a month the Fascists held a strategic point on the great upper walls of the historic fortress from which they were able to dominate the city gates.

"Little good that will do them," a syndicalist militiaman said to me. "Last night we captured another one of their food stores and brought out hundreds of sacks of wheat and whole cases of canned fish, preserves and spices."

An attempted aerial attack by Fascist planes failed when a squadron of more than 20 government planes chased the insurgent pilots away from the city.

Reporters Under Fire in Spain

Madrid, Sept. 24 (INS)—Less than 20 miles apart, two correspondents of International News Service stood with the opposing Spanish armies on the Toledo battlefront this afternoon within range of the deadly fire buried across No Man's Land by either side.

H. R. Knickerbocker, noted correspondent, who has been with the White armies from the start, reached Torrijos with the Spanish Foreign Legion.

Thomas A. Loayza, International News Service Madrid bureau Chief, motored with the Red forces to Santa Cruz de Retamar.

Rebel shells flew over Loayza's head, and loyalist ones hurled toward the insurgent lines where Knickerbocker stood.

Love's Secrets Told by Longo

Hubby Wants Her

Kisses, Hugs In Dark Lobby

Stories of petting parties requestered North Shore lanes; clandestine rendezvous in their former Winchester home and in dark theater balconies after they were separated were unfolded today in Middlesex probate court as Paul Longo took the stand and professed his ardent love for his wife.

Seeking to block the attempt of his pretty wife, Janet Longo, with whom he eloped 18 months ago, from divorcing him, the young husband, twisting his hands, revealed all under direct and cross-examination.

SICK OF IT ALL

Once, squirming under a merciless barrage of questions shot at him by Attorney Harold Johnson, counsel for his wife, Longo cried out:

"Oh! I'm sick of this whole terrible mess!"

Longo told the court that on many occasions he and his separated wife drove to secluded spots near Gloucester, Winthrop and other beach resorts and gave vent to their amorous emotions.

The young husband with a faint flush of ping creeping beyond his collar-line admitted kissing, hugging and whispering sweet-nothings in his wife's ear while seated in the balconies of Boston theaters.

Questioned by his attorney, Arthur Sharillo as to whether or not he still loved his wife, Longo replied with ardor:

"I love her. I want her back. I want to live with her—forever."

Atty. Sharillo questioned Longo about the goldfish incident.

NO FISH FUNERAL

"Who bought those goldfish?"

"I did," Longo answered, a smile flickering on his lips.

"What happened to them?"

"One of them died and we threw it away."

"You mean to say," Sharillo asked dramatically, "that there was no funeral service."

"No sir," Longo replied.

Longo under direct examination stated that on one occasion after they had "petted" in a Boston theater they returned to their former home in Winchester and that Janet had wept at the sight of all the furnishings and do-dads about the house.

BLAMES HER MOTHER

The young husband told the court that his wife never raised any objections to his amorous advances on any occasion, and that in many instances she made the advances.

He related that she would sit on the floor in the vestibule of his car when they neared her home so that the neighbors wouldn't see her and report the incident to her mother.

Longo charged his wife's mother with destroying their happiness and stated that Mr. Mitchell, his father-in-law, told him on one occasion:

"Some day you'll learn, son, that you'll just have to keep your mouth shut and take it on the chin."

U. S. INSURANCE SCHOOL HONORS 5 WOMEN

Like sweet girl graduates, five women life insurance underwriters today were graduated from the American College of Life Underwriters at the Hotel Statler today.

Reminiscent of their college days, the women, topnotchers in their field, stood up in the ballroom of the Hotel Statler where the 47th annual convention of the National Association is in progress, and obtained degrees which entitle them to the distinction of placing C. L. U. (Charted Life Underwriter) after their names.

To obtain the degree, comprehensive competitive examinations as difficult and intricate as those upon which lie as big a certified public accountant degree is consistent, had to be passed.

BOSTON REPRESENTED

No Boston women won among them. But Boston, already numbers several women life insurance underwriters who in their few years have won the distinction.

Women graduates today were Cora Dulaney of Dallas, Texas; Bertha H. Adams, Chico, Ill.; Helen E. Jackson, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Muriel L. MacFarlane, Kansas City, Mo.; and Mildred Stone, Newark, N. J.

Degrees were awarded to 143 men.

HIGHLIGHT OF DAY

The exercises, always a feature of a national convention, were the highlight of today's session.

The Life Insurance College was organized in 1927. It administers international quality to educational standard for the profession of life underwriting as a function of institution in a world filled with economic, social and political problems which these graduates are hopeful they can solve.

Miss Jackson, one of the five, graduated from Vassar in 1926. She was a classmate of Miss Mildred McAfee, the new president of Wellesley College.

Marsden opened fire with a .45 automatic as he fled down Riverdale street. Police fired seven shots.

Two More Quin Films To Follow 'Reunion'

They Have Sox Appeal

JEAN HERSHOLT DOROTHY PETERSON

By PEGGY DOYLE
Boston American Staff Writer

Hollywood, Sept. 24—You're going to bust right out laughing when you see Doctor Dafoe—excuse it please, Jean Hersholt—being hustled down the steps of Callander's Poupondere and into his car by Town Constable Slim Summerville, who's betting on nothing less than sextuplets.

They were shooting this sequence for "Reunion," the second film instalment starring Canada's darling Dionnes, soon to be released by Twentieth Century-Fox, when I approached the set.

"Let's have a retake," says Director Norman Taurog, with a note of authority.

Taurog, who directed "The Country Doctor," is scheduled to make two more pictures featuring the quintuplets in addition to the one now in production.

What Ziegfeld did for the "Follies" is just a patch on what Taurog is expected to do for the irresistible "moppets" in the course of their combined career, cinematically speaking.

Taurog is famous for his direction of child stars and with not "naturals" as the Dionne five his company is certain that the box office take will be fabulous.

Ideal Doctor

Hersholt, a very dapper gentleman with silvery, waxed mustache out of character, has so successfully borrowed the world-renowned Canadian physician's harried preoccupied, conscientious, earnest, humorous country doctor attitude that, he says, he'd forever beg addressed as "Doctor Dafoe."

His slightly rumpled dark suit, shiny at the seams, his blue shirt and darker blue tie, his homemade looking checked cap, the gold pencil and fountain pen in his breast pocket and the shabby, bunny-like doctor's bag he carries are all reminiscent of the country doctors you got all your trust in—and richly so—when the baby had the croup or when grandpappy slipped down the cellar steps that last cold night.

Dorothy Peterson, who plays the nurse to Hersholt's doctor, is a lovely person with the sophisticated-wise clean complexion in all Hollywood. She is wearing a simple blue felt hat over her office arrangement of flaxen hair and a bright navy-blue coat covers her sheer white uniform.

Long, lanky Slim Summerville looks just like you expected. He is chatting with his stand-in, on whose stockinged feet are strapped 9-inch soles to enable him to measure up to Slim's height. The standin assumes about on his heightening "clogs" quite easily.

Director Taurog who, by the way, is Jackie Cooper's uncle and the man who directed him to stardom in "Skippy," is discussing with Summerville just how an expectant father of sextuplets might be expected to act when he goes for the doctor.

Taurog, a stout, bespectacled man in a white shirt and gray trousers, removes the helmet he is wearing to wipe off his perspiring forehead.

Then he orders:

"Quiet! Turn 'em"

The floor man of the sound department calls:

"Up to speed!"

Next Taurog says:

"All right, camera."

Whereupon, Slim Summerville rushes through the gates and up the driveway leading to the entrance to the quintuplets' hospital and as Hersholt and Miss Peterson come out the door, he gasps, excitedly:

"Open up in the name of the law! Open up this gate! Doc, hurry, Doc! They're comin', Please hurry, Jenny's callin' for you."

Trailing him is a man in an ill-fitting reddish-brown suit. He is John Qualen who portrays the quintuplets' father, obviously overwrought at the possibility that the town constable's wife, as her husband ardently believes, may present her husband with sextuplets.

A Football Team

Grasping Hersholt by the arm and half-dragging him to his car, Slim says he's "positive sure" when the good doctor asks him if he is sure.

"Gee, Doc," he exults, "ain't this goin' to be wonderful? Six babies and five babies in two families!"

"A football team and two cheerleaders," says Dorothy Peterson, drily.

Slim reaches over to sound the automobile-horn and to yell, "Gangway" to hurry the doctor.

Suddenly, perplexed, Slim tells Hersholt:

"But you told me it wasn't goin' to happen today."

"I wouldn't be a bit surprised if it didn't," returns Hersholt. "I have been on five false alarms."

"But this is the sixth."

Hersholt turns to Miss Peterson, telling her she needn't come along; it's her day off, and besides there's really no necessity.

"Oh, yes, I'm going all the way," she retorts. "You can use another nurse for retail delivery, but you need me when they come wholesale. Some very peculiar things happen in this town."

Six times this scene is rehearsed before Taurog says:

"Quiet, folks! Picture."

First, however, a make-up man, brother-in-law of the famous Westmore tribe of beauticians, gives Dorothy Peterson a new mouth—the heat having caused her lipstick to drip a bit.

"Hold her still, boys, and no scuffling on the cement," says Director Taurog.

The scene is shot and Hersholt strolls over to boast about little Emilie recognizing him this second time the company went up to Callander to make a picture and to ask after Boston's prettiest reporter, Marjorie McBride, who did a series on the "quins" and the production's assisting cast for the Boston American.

"Emilie," said Hersholt pridefully, "worked with me better than any of the other babies. She seemed to recognize me instantly when we met for the second production. In her little piping voice, she would snuggle up to me and call me 'Docteur.'

"Can I tell them apart? Well, yes, after I've had a good chance to check up on various little leads to their identity. Annette looks much like Yvonne, Cecile and Emilie are similar. Marie looks quite different. Her face is narrower than the others. They're all very pretty babies and most affectionate at times, like most babies.

"I noticed that their hair is a little lighter than it was the last time I saw them, due to the time they spend in the sun. There is now a distinctly reddish tint to it.

"They are very well-behaved children and there is no need to worry about the problem of their up-bringing. Dr. Dafoe and the other guardians are taking care of that matter with amazing good sense.

Sane Rearing

"The babies play together happily and are completely unself-conscious about any attention they may be getting. They are really being brought up more sanely than most children, for no one is permitted to gush over them. They are a little slow in talking, but it must be remembered, they are premature babies and so this is quite natural. Their French nurse is teaching them to speak in their native tongue but soon they are to have an English nurse who will put them on the bi-lingual standard."

Between shootings, Hersholt puffs comfortably on a low-hung pipe. Someone says that his attractively blue-white hair required a week of tests to bring it to that tint.

His nice, brown hair, at the suggestion of J. Edward Bromberg, member of this as well as the recent "Girls' Dormitory" cast, was treated to a flour-and-dash of clown white. Entirely satisfactory as a "hair-whitener" for Bromberg, it wouldn't do at all for Hersholt.

While we are talking, "Doc" (William) Bishop, Shirley Temple's excellent publicity man, walks over. "Doc" Bishop is expecting an heir or an heiress any day now.

Musing from the set because they are not required for any of today's shooting are lovely Rochelle Hudson, Astrid Allwyn, one-time Massachusetts girl; Robert Kent, from somewhere in Connecticut; Helen Vinson, Helen Jerome, Julius Tannen and others.

INSURANCE MEN HEAR PHELPS SCORE REDS

Government control of private business leads to control of speech and thought, Professor Emeritus William Lyon Phelps of Yale declared today before the National Association of Life Underwriters at the Hotel Statler.

"Regimentation is the enemy of progress," he said. "There are no two words in the English language more opposed, more irreconcilable than liberty and communism.

"Individual independence means every man under his own vine and fig tree. This desirable state of affairs cannot be brought about by standardization or by suppression of individual liberty.

AMERICAN AIM

"Although many different religions have given pictures of perfect bliss in some future state after death, and although many reformers and imaginative writers have made a Utopia, expressing their own views of what constitutes the perfect conditions of life on earth, we find in the book of the prophet Micah, written more than two thousand years ago, a much more modest and humble view of individual and family independence and happiness.

"This is what Micah prophesied: 'they shall sit every man under his vine and under his figtr ee; and none shall make them afraid.'

"That does not seem much to ask for, if we compare it with say the Mohemmedan conception of Paradise; but it is all a good American asks for. And it is tragic to think how far away it seems, and yet it ought to be an attainable goal. What is more tragic is that it is father away now than it was 30 years ago.

"All the prophet promises is an opportunity for every man to live independently, to be responsible for his own acts, and to be let alone.

RAPS COMMUNISM

"Whatever this desirable state is, it is not Communism," Calvin Coolidge said.

"Progress depends very largely on the encouragement of variety. Whatever tends to standardize the community, to establish fixed and rigid modes of thought, tends to fossilize society. It is the ferment of ideas, the clash of dissenting judgments, the privilege of the individual to develop his own thoughts and shape his own character, that makes progress possible.

"The best thing Bryan ever said was, "The people have a right to make their own mistakes."

"The best thing about an organization like this is that you are helping people to prepare for independence and self-reliance in their old age. Liberty is the most precious possession of the individual."

"Log Cabin Town" Springs Up in N. H.

Northumberland, N. H., Sept. 24 (AP)—Eight hardy families, for economic reasons, reverting to the pioneer instincts of their forefathers, have begfun a log cabin cooperative community in this section.

High rents, cramped playroom for children and lack of space for vegetable gardens were contributing factors in the decision, they said, to hew homes for themselves on the edge of the wilderness that flanks the Daniel Webster highway.

The cabins, built by the settlers themselves at a cost of less than $40 each, are constructed of pine, with clear maple and white birch flooring, all the timber taken from the surrounding woods.

The original cost of the land, about $60 an acre, and materials not available from natural sources constitute the outlay for what members of the community describe as "comfortable homes."

MOTHER LEADING INSURANCE SELLER

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

She couldn't add a column of figures. She couldn't balance her bank account. That was 11 years ago.

But, today, Mrs. Martha H. Boott of Brookline, mother of a married daughter and a married son, and wife of the founder of a Lowell cotton mill, is one of the outstanding life insurance underwriters in the country.

She found it necessary to do something to maintain the same standard of living to which she was accustomed, prior to the depression. She wanted to give her children an education.

So—she adopted a career; a career in selling life insurance.

Her first year in business she sold $265,000 worth of life insurance. Today she has membership in the distinct group of "Quarter of a Million Dollar" women throughout the nation.

A staunch advocate of marriage, plus a career theory for women, Mrs. Boott confessed at the 47th annual convention of the National Association at the Hotel Statler today that because of her entrance into the business world she is "a better mother, a better wife and a better woman."

MRS. MARTHA H. BOOTT

Enters Business

"Because of an arising acute economic problem, coming out of the World War, I entered the business world. I had never been a business woman and knew nothing about business. No one thought I could do anything in business—not even, my husband.

"You see I am strictly the feminine type. But I walked into the Paul F. Clark Agency of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company and told them I wanted a job. They thought I was just another woman who had become restless. But that first year, I wrote $265,000 worth of business."

In 1931, Mrs. Boott, who came to this country from Germany at the age of 15, lead the entire personnel of some 8500 men and women of her company in the nation.

For five years, in succession, she lead her own agency.

"But don't lose sight of the fact," she continued, "that I am a happily married woman. My husband, my family and my friends glory in my success. I feel that because of my industrial associations and contacts, I have become a better woman and I have made a much better woman than I had ever hoped to become.

"I had to accept discipline and mental adjustments—hard things—when I became a business woman. Now, I run my home on a business basis. There exits extremely close ties in my family, and everybody is happy.

"Careers are fine for women if they are willing to pay the price; that of making mental adjustments and accepting this discipline. Careers are not for every woman; not for all married women; only for those women for whom there exists some great power driving them on to achievement and success. With me it was my family.

"Probably, because I love people and love life, I was an easy person to readjust. But, I always kept my family first, last and always in my mind. The job I was doing was for them, and I was willing to make all the necessary sacrifices.

"I can safely say that life really began for me when I became a business woman.

Puppet Act to Feature Style Show at Ten Acres

By BETTY ALDEN

"I HAVE A LITTLE puppet that goes in and out with me!" will be the theme song of the debutantes and their older sisters who are to serve as models in the after-dinner fashion show at Ten Acres in Wayland the evening of October 6 . . . as a tiny puppet likeness of each mannequin will appear in the miniature theater, a member of the cast even to the dresses which the models will wear . . .

FRANCES COVE

The performance of the puppets, in short dancing acts of their own as well as take-offs on the models, is an added feature of the entertainment which is planned to take place after dessert and just before the supper dancing begins . . . The puppets are presented by the Show Box Miniature Theater . . .

Several young married girls are going to model . . . Mrs. Carrington Mason Lloyd, who as Arkie de Rosset was called upon to model almost as often as the professional mannequins, will be settled in her new house in time to give the occasion her undivided attention . . .

Arkie and her bridegroom have moved from their honeymoon cottage in Chestnut Hill, not far from the Longwood Cricket Club, to a sturdier house in Cambridge for the winter . . .

The cottage was the envy of all their friends who practically camped beside their swimming pool in the summer . . . it used to be the gardener's cottage on a large estate and has been remodelled into a typical love nest . . .

Mrs. Henry Cushing, the former Marjorie Estabrook, and sister-in-law of Betsy Cushing Roosevelt and the other two handsome Cushing girls, will display several autumn suits and evening gowns . . .

Mrs. Wallace Scudder (Betty Crane) will have to tuck her baby into his cradle early that evening in order to get to Wayland in time for make up and fittings, for she, too, is to be a mannequin . . .

Others will be Evelyn Weatherby, Frederika Sargent, Louise English and Janice Miner who will have the fun of seeing themselves as others see them when their puppet counterparts make their debut on the miniature stage . . .

Fannie Cove, who has moved back to Winchester from a summer in Manchester, will be another attractive model and also helping out will be Louise Howe, Mrs. William Carr, Virginia Phelan, Mrs. Robert Hills and several debs who will probably be a little nervous as they pirouette and glide along the runway in one of their first appearances as models this season . . . they are Sue Carl, Eleanor Van Kleeck, Polly Keppler, Janet McNeil, and Betty Sagendorph . . .

Nathaniel Winthrops Going South

THE NATHANIEL WINTHROPS (Serita Bartlett) are transferring their allegiance from the Harvard Law School to the University of Virginia this winter . . .

Nat will again delve into the intricacies of contracts, torts and ethics, while Serita and their infant son will endeavor to see if it's true what they say about Dixie . . .

Nat's sister, Kay Winthrop, has a shooting box in South Carolina which should serve as an excuse for many a pleasant motor trip further into the southland during the winter . . .

Dick Waters, Jr., has undoubtedly performed his share of practical jokes on nervous bridegrooms . . . so he had no comeback when he found the spark plugs had been removed from his car as he and Joan Chapin tried to make a hasty getaway from their wedding reception . . . They got out and made a dash for the nearest available car . . .

Hallam Movius, Jr., Weds Today

THIS IS HALLAM MOVIUS, JR'S., wedding day . . . though there will be few Bostonians in the little circle gathered in St. James Chapel, London, at noon, to hear Hallam pledge his heart and hand to Nancy Champion de Crespigny of Adelaide, South Australia, and London . . .

Even though the couple decided upon a place far from the homes of each, the two mothers are present for the ceremony . . . Mrs. A. L. West Movius of Beacon street went to London about a month ago for the wedding and the bride's mother, Mrs. C. T. Champion de Crespigny, is also there . . .

George West Movius of Boston is the best man and only attendant and there is no reception other than perhaps a small gathering at Nancy's apartment in London after the knot is tied . . .

The bride and bridegroom are coming to this country sometime next month to reside in Cambridge . . . Mr. Movius is a member of the Harvard Archaeological Department . . . He is the son of Hallam Movius of Millis . . . nephew of George Saltonstall West of Chestnut Hill and grand-nephew of Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall and Mrs. John Silsbee Curtis . . .

MRS. WILLIAM C. VINCENT CLUB Leadership Changes

Leslie Blake In Fashion Show

MISS LESLIE BLAKE, popular Dedham post-debutante, played her accordion as she strolled among the tables during the luncheon given at the Brae Burn Country Club, yesterday afternoon, to entertain the wives of the insurance underwriters who are now in convention in Boston.

Following the luncheon the ladies witnessed a fashion parade of the new fall modes.

Mrs. Paul Clark of Boston and Cohasset, whose husband is in charge of the convention, lunched with Mrs. Robert W. Moore, Jr. Mrs. Clark looked like a model awaiting her turn on the runway in a modish dress of black crepe, a black beret accented with a necklace of pearls and a sable scarf. Mrs. Moore was also in a black dress trimmed with shiny braid, and black hat trimmed with Persian lamb.

Mrs. Jay Benton was on hand to cast an approving eye on the modelling of her daughter, Mary, and to chat with Mrs. George Willard Smith, whose taupe tunic dress and felt hat ensemble was a slight variation from the almost unanimous black.

Mrs. Elbert H. Brock was in a black tunic dress with a luxurious cross fox about her shoulders. Godets of black and white embroidery accented Mrs. Benjamin Badanock's black dress. A silver fox scarf and black hat completed the costume.

Other guests at the tables were Miss Eleanor Hayward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Hayward; Mrs. Manuel Campe, Mrs. Daniel Needham, Mrs. Ernest Crane of Indianapolis, Ind., Mrs. John Stevenson of Philadelphia, Mrs. John Davis of Pittsburgh, Mrs. Frank L. Jones of New York, Mrs. William Watson, whose daughter, Louise, was a model; Mrs. Clarence Wyatt and Mrs. William Duff of Pittsburgh with her daughter, Miss Charlotte Duff.

Mannequins in the fashion show were Miss Mary Benton, Miss Jean Clark, Miss Jean Cullen, Miss Barbara Jameson, Miss Leslie Blake, Miss Curtis Forbes, Miss Annette Hollis, Miss Louise Watson and Miss Caroline Oveson.

Fighting Music By Lombardos

Rows Create Harmony

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

BETTY DI PESA GUY LOMBARDO

Guy Lombardo, handsome band leader, being interviewed by Betty Di Pesa, Boston Evening American reporter.

By BETTY Di PESA

Don't let those smooth, dreamy melodies done by the Lombardo boys fool you.

There's a family feud behind them, including tearing of hair, flinging of hands and a good approach to a fist fight.

No, this isn't any expose of the workings behind the scenes of the Lombardos, better known as the Royal Canadians.

It's just what Guy, in his different manner, told us. Not confidentially, either. Just as a plain statement of fact.

"Plenty of good comes from those arguments," Guy explained, as he relaxed between times at the Flamingo room in Levaggi's, where he's appearing this week.

"The hotter the argument, the smoother the resulting melody."

You see, Guy doesn't believe in that old adage that "too many cooks spoil the broth."

On the contrary, four minds are better than one, in his opinion, and judging from the success of the Royal Canadians we think we had better give him the benefit of the doubt.

They Fight

But to get back to the beginning we were interested in the family angle.

And nosiness being a reporter's prerogative, we asked:

"How do you and your brothers get along, Mr. Lombardo?"

"We fight like the devil," was the came-back.

"You know—four latins in a stew," he explained.

Then he told of how when Larry Owens, the saxophonist, joined the band and after attending the first rehearsal, returned home dejectedly to his wife.

He thought the band had broken up.

"And when he met us the next night and we were all as smooth as honey, he didn't know what to make of it," Guy stated.

In addition to the four Lombardo brothers, there are nine other members of the band, making a nice, or not so nice, 13.

"Thirteen! how do you live it down?" We quizzed.

But evidently Maestro Lombardo had given it some thought because he had it all figured out that the arranger was considered a member of the orchestra, making the membership a full dozen.

Guy, who in appearance is the Rudolph Valentino among orchestra leaders, used to play the violin.

"But I don't any more because I can get plenty of better fiddle players than I very cheap," he explains.

Yes, modesty is a very agreeable quality about the young man who hails from London, Ontario, Canada.

We really embarrassed him when we asked him how he accounted for his success.

There's a Mrs. Guy Lombardo. Much in the background. We asked Guy about this.

"She's not in the band," and he seemed to think that accounted for that. And most likely it does.

Richard Dohertys Return Home

Of much interest to scholastic circles is the return of Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Doherty of Arlington from their two-month automobile tour across the continent. While passing through Texas, they stopped to attend the Dallas Fort Worth Exposition. In Colorado, they enjoyed the privilege of visiting Indian reservations, and were especially favored in being permitted to view the famous snake dance, which was presented by the Indian tribes as an invocation to the God of Rain. Soon thereafter, much to the joy and gratification of the Indians, the heavens poured forth a deluge of rain, which caused Mr. and Mrs. Doherty to curtail their stay in Colorado.

Moving on to California, they watched the filming of parts of some of the coming pictures.

Mr. Doherty is associate professor of economics at Boston University School of Business Administration. Mrs. Doherty is a well known artist.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gavin of Brookline and Rockport have decided to return to their Brookline home earlier than usual this year. Miss Joan Gavin, their talented daughter who gained recognition as an artist at Rockport this summer, will go to New York, where she will visit friends for a couple of weeks.

Leaguer To Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Sydney M. Williams of Wellesley and Peterborough, N. H., announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jane Peele Williams, to Nathaniel Bacon Greene, son of Mr. and Mrs. Prescott M. Greene of North Carolina.

Miss Williams, who is a member of both the Junior League and the Vincent Club, attended the Winsor School and Beaver Country Day, and is at present studying at the School of Horticulture in Ambler, Pa.

Mr. Greene graduated from Yale, class of 1931, and from the Harvard School of Business Administration in 1933. He is a nephew of Professor William C. Greene of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

No wedding date has been announced.

Hall-McKaig Ceremony Unites Skating Stars

Miss Olivia Stone and several other accomplished figure skaters of Boston went down to Philadelphia Saturday to take part in the wedding of Miss Annah Colket McKaig and William Penn Gaskell Hall, 3d, who have held the junior pair skating championship of Philadelphia for the past two years.

Miss McKaig, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar S. McKaig, of Radnor, Pa., also held the ladies' junior title last year.

The Rev. Louis C. Washburn, rector of Christ Church in Philadelphia, and the Rev. Richard H. Gurley of St. Martin's Church in Radnor, jointly officiated at the ceremony which was held in Christ Church. William Penn, from whom the bridegroom is descended, formerly attended this church. Mrs. McKaig is descended from Thomas French, who with William Penn was one of the first proprietors of New Jersey.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and a lace train which has been worn by brides in four generations of her family. She carried orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Marjorie F. McKaig was her sister's maid of honor and the other attendants were Miss Ella Brock Sinkler, Miss Maria S. Bullitt, Miss Mary Louise Wood, Miss Octavia M. duPont and Miss Frances Pepper Wright, all of Philadelphia, and Miss Olivia Stone of Boston.

Thomas Macy Chadwick of New York was the best man. The ushers were Herbert P. Parsons of Boston, Edward T. Stuart, Jr., George R. Harris, Jr., Daniel Wister, William Winder Laird, Jr., of Wilmington, John T. Burnell, 3d, and David Scott and James B. Madden of Boston.

The wedding reception took place at Alderbrook, the Radnor home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. McKaig attended Miss Wright's School at Bryn Mawr College and studied art at Cas'Alta in Florence, Italy, last winter. She is descended from from Tristam Coffin, one of the first settlers in Nantucket. The Coffin house, built in 1652, still stands in Newburyport.

Mr. Hall is a graduate of St. Paul's School in Concord, N. H., and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He is descended from the Emersons and Lowells of Boston and is a great-grandson of Judge Hare of Philadelphia, and of Colonel Samuel Boyer Davis of Wilmington, Del., who defended Lewes against the English in 1812.

ESTEY BATTLES BALLOT 'PURGE' BY M'GLUE

By Bernard J. Doherty

While fresh demands for removal of the two Democratic Metropolitan Water Supply Commission members were sounding today, more warning broke out in the state Ballot Law Commission.

In addition to the refusal of Francis W. Estey, the Republican member, to vote with his Democratic colleagues, two of the candidates, whose removal from the ballot is desired by the Democrats ignored the commission and failed to appear.

Without a defense having been made, Chairman Charles H. McGlue and Commissioner Whitfield Tuck voted to order off the ballot the names of Paul Frederick Sturtevant, candidate for representative in the 27th Middlesex district, and Edward Avery House candidate in the sixth Norfolk.

In addition, the name of Charles Brooks, candidate for representative in the seventh Suffolk, was also stricken off. Brooks first offering to withdraw and then stating that he believed he did not have sufficient genuine names on his independent papers.

All these moves were combatted by Commissioner Estey, the veteran member who has served for 33 years and who has been constantly overridden by the Curley newcomers, Chairman McGlue and Tuck.

Today's action was on the blanket protest of the Democratic State Committee against the nomination papers of all independent candidates for state office, in an effort to remove candidates of the Democratic foes and split the vote of the favored Democratic ones.

QUESTIONS McGLUE RIGHT

During the heated proceedings Commissioner Estey questioned the right of Chairman McGlue to proceed with the hearing in the face of the Supreme Court injunction restraining the commission from proceeding against the candidacy of Thomas C. O'Brien, as Union party-backed candidate for United States senator.

"This blanket protest is no good," declared Estey, "and moreover it is being questioned by the Supreme Court."

"I have no information that it is being decided before the court," Chairman McGlue snapped back.

"It clearly states so in the restraining order," said Estey.

"I just received this restraining order this morning," McGlue claimed, "although the newspapers tried to make the public believe they had been served yesterday."

"I have information that the Secretary of State is going to proceed with the printing of the ballot despite this restraining order, and if he does do that I can proceed with these hearings. I'm not going to delay these matters."

Estey (sharply): "Never mind that 'I' business. Put the matter to a vote."

McGlue then asked Tuck if he was voting to proceed with the hearings, and Tuck replied that he would "vote to support the chairman."

"By a majority vote the hearing will proceed," McGlue droned sonorously.

NEW OUSTER DEMANDS

Meanwhile, the demands for removal of the two Democratic members of the Water Supply Commission came in a storm of protest at Governor Curley's action in blocking their ouster by the Executive Council, following voiding of the Quabbin "gift contract" awards.

Norman McDonald, executive secretary of the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Association, which first demanded the inquiry conducted by Attorney-General Dever, led with a withering statement against the governor.

He pointed out that the governor, after the invalidating of the contracts by Dever's report, had stated he had no power to oust the two commissioners, Frank G. Lavelle and Edward Keller, without the consent of the council, and then blocked such a move by adjourning the session.

"The Commonwealth is being treated to the sorry spectacle of a ducking, dodging chief executive, who dares not submit his campaign for another office on the slogan 'A Man for a Man's Job,'" McDonald said.

Judge Felix Forte, Republican candidate for Attorney-General, attacked his Democratic opponent, Attorney-General Dever, for executing a "bold whitewash" in an address to some 600 members of the Scandinavian Club at Boston City Club.

John W. Haigis, gubernatorial nominee, at the same meeting commended the action of Executive Councilor Winfield Schuster in breaking the deadlock of the two commissioners and declared his belief that if the facts were sifted "the request of the Councilor would be shown to be not unreasonable."

OTHER BROADSIDES

Other broadsides were delivered by Speaker Leverett Saltonstall and Representative Philip J. Bowker of Brookline, who emphasized the Quabbin case as another episode in "long series of waste and extravagance under the present administration."

Hitting at the conduct of the governor in the finding on the Quabbin project and also the conduct of Charles Moylan of the bar of law commission, Dr. Susan said:

"The Democratic ticket includes some very worthy gentlemen and I shall do my best to insure their elections. However—I feel that the best interests of the party are being jeopardized by the presence in it of individuals who, lacking any real foundation, have reached positions of power through fanatic appeal to party spirit.

"In a democracy the electorate should ruthlessly eliminate from public life all officials who have proved themselves unworthy of the trust given them. Only such action will result in the election of others equally untrustworthy.

"The McGlue and O'Brien affair reeks to the high heavens as well as the Quabbin contracts."

Crossley Poll Shows

New York, Illinois Big Vote Problem

By ARCHIBALD M. CROSSLEY
President of Crossley, Inc.

(Copyright, 1936, Scripps Howard Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

New York, Sept. 24—New York and Illinois, two of the three most important doubtful states in the coming election, as shown so far by the straw ballot of the Crossley Poll, today offered a baffling problem for statistical analysis.

The problem in both states was, essentially, what percentage of the possible vote would be cast on election day in the large cities, where Roosevelt leads, and in the rest of the state which showed a Landon preference of virtually even weight.

Landon's Backing

In New York state, as a whole, the latest poll figures showed Roosevelt with 51 per cent of the major party vote, Landon with 49 per cent.

But the "breakdown" within the state indicated that any poll based on mere population, or taken according to the registered votes of districts, might easily be in error. New York city, with 30 per cent of the total state population, normally casts about 44 per cent of the total state vote.

In other words, the city votes less heavily than the rest of the state—due to such factors as change of residence, large number of aliens, etc.

Our "breakdown" shows that, so far, a careful poll taken in New York city by Congressional Districts, by income classes, and in proportion to the past actual votes cast, Landon has about 30 per cent and Roosevelt about 70.

But in New York State outside of the Greater City, Landon leads 2 to 1.

Illinois Close

But fundamentally the question goes to the "heaviness" of the vote on election day, and whether the final results will show that the city voter has decided to turn out to the polls in more nearly the proportion of the upstate voters.

Factors tending to bring out an unusually large city vote, or conversely, an unusually small one, are complex and many. Incidentally, New York west from Syracuse is known to be more heavily Landon than New York from Syracuse east and south in Westchester County.

In Illinois, where the poll is 55-55, Landon leads down-state by a close, but fairly consistent margin, while Roosevelt leads narrowly in Chicago. Chicago also has a higher percentage of "undecided" votes, and of minor-party votes. Most polls heretofore have indicate that Illinois is teetering on the line.

The Crossley poll is published daily in the Boston Evening American and Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

START BOSTON RECOUNT

Recount of votes cast for various candidates in the Democratic primary started in the election commissioners' office at City Hall today.

While most of the recount dealt with the state legislative contests, the most interesting was that for Albert P. McCulloch of Dorcester, winner of the Republican nomination for Congress, but defeated by Congressman John W. McCormack for the Democratic nomination in the 12th Congressional district.

McCulloch was endorsed by the Union for Social Justice and polled 7323 votes in the Republican contest and 20,744 votes in the Democratic primary to 38,456 for Congressman McCormack.

As a result of McCulloch's petition, a recount of the votes cast for United States senator and governor in the Democratic primary in the 12th Congressional district was also started.

The outstanding recount in the House of Representatives fight centered in Ward 8, Roxbury, between Mrs. Mildred Harris, sister of City Councilor Richard D. Gleason, and Mrs. Mary B. Gleason, her sister-in-law, wife of the late Representative John L. Gleason. Both were defeated in the primary.

Other House of Representative recount contests included Wards 1, 2, 3, 6, 7, 8, 10 and 11.

SUSANNA PRIZE WON BY WOMAN FROM N. H.

From the foothills of New Hampshire comes the winning entry in the $1000 Hearst national Landon Campaign Song Contest today.

Mrs. Mary B. Rounds, of Mountain View House, Whitefield, N. H., wins the $10 daily award offered each day for the most original lyrics for a Landon campaign song set to the inspiring of "Oh! Susanna."

There's a little more than three weeks left before the contest closes on October 12, and the judges, nationally famous composers and musicians select the winning entry for the $1000 award, a second prize of $500, and 25 awards of $20 each.

We set no limit to the number of entries you can submit. All we ask is that you submit original lyrics that have meter and swing and that the presentation is made on ONE side of a single sheet of paper.

There's $16 daily to the winner and a chance of winning that grand prize so come you New Englanders let's show the rest of the country what we can do.

Here's today's winning entry:

He's from the State of Kansas, and Alf Landon is his name.
He's on his way to Washington and Presidential fame.
He loves the North, he loves the South, he loves the East and West,
And when he's in the White House, he will weather every test.

(Refrain)

Oh, Alf Landon, you are the Nation's choice!
We'll cast our ballots all for you
—the Constitution's voice.

We've had enough of N. R. A.
and all the alphabet.
We're through with doles and charity, and now we are all set
To save the Constitution and the good old U. S. A.
By voting for Alf Landon; he's the Nation's choice today.

So come on, folks, and cast your vote! Don't fail to do your part,
And we'll elect for President a man who's very smart.
He'll quickly solve the Nation's ills; they'll vanish one by one,
And as the next four years roll by, we'll say "With Alf we've won."

I had a dream the other night—
I'll tell it to you now—
I thought 'twas nineteen forty,
and election day was due.
I could not find in all this land a single Democrat.
They all had gone Republican with Landon at the bat!

"Sweepstakes" bring pleasure to war veterans

From a veterans' home in Hearne, Texas, a number of entries all in the same hand-writing come in each week. Of course we checked up to make sure that the entries conformed to the rules, and one of the men explained: "Most of the boys can't get around—but I do and so I fill out their cards for them."

We're glad to say that the boys have been pretty good pickers, too.

Have you entered yet? Have you won your delicious Lucky Strikes? Tune in "Your Hit Parade"—Wednesday and Saturday evenings. Listen, judge, and compare the tunes—then try Your Lucky Strike Sweepstakes. And if you're not already smoking Luckies, buy a pack today and try them, too. Maybe you've been missing something. You'll appreciate the delicate taste of Luckies—a Light Smoke of rich, ripe-bodied tobaccos.

A LIGHT SMOKE LEAVES A CLEAN TASTE

A clean taste—a clear throat—what a joy when you wake up in the morning! You'll be glad, that last evening you chose a Light Smoke—Luckies.

I can always recognize Harvard students in the audience, she said. All I rather like to see them. They seem so refined compared to those I see in the Loew's Orpheum circuit.

But I have to be careful about saying it to them. They take it seriously. If I made disparaging remarks about the boys they'd insist on coming around to the stage door and try to make a date with me.

Same Story

But what can I do? she asked. It's part of my act to flirt with male kids in the audience and the Harvard boys in the front seats. Of course, she added, I never do go out with them.

They all have the same story to tell when they want a go-between, she said. They say they can't get into a certain fraternity unless they have it. Sometimes they sound so sincere that I want to help them.

The Harvard boys, she went on, are much better behaved than students from other colleges. It is impossible for me to play New Haven. The Yale boys would invariably disrupt the whole theater. The Harvard boys are—well, they're darlings.

Autos Kill 7 Children In Day

QUINCY BOY NEAR DEATH

Stung by the slaying of seven children by automobiles in Greater Boston in a 24-hour period, Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin today appealed to motorists to take more care to keep the children off the streets.

Goodwin Acts

It's about time somebody did something. I have done my part in urging the passage of this city—and other ordinances protecting lives of children—on hand. But that will not answer the problem.

"This terrible slaughter is a lesson to mothers. Children are not being taught to keep off busy streets. I've said it with my own eyes. Mothers are and culpable blame, of course.

"Responsibility in most cases rests with the driver. But if we had less careless mothers the drivers wouldn't have so much responsibility when driving through busy streets."

Four Infants

William Donovan, 1 Winthrop avenue, Revere, killed by auto.

Frederick McDermott, 1 Brimmer street, Malden, killed by truck.

Donald McCash, 1 Columbus avenue, Roxbury, killed by truck.

Anthony Orlandella, 9 School street, Revere, killed by taxicab.

Dorothy Phillips, 1 Walnut court, Neponset, killed by truck.

Joan Miller, 2 months, a girl, East Boston, killed by truck.

William Lange, 16, Madison avenue, Chelsea, killed by passing automobile (five).

Hole-In-One Golfers Tempt Fate at Franklin Park Pitch

SOME OF MY COLLEAGUES IN THIS MAD, mad newspaper business are promoting a golf tournament which deserves the censor of all right-thinking Christians. I refer to the hole-in-one contest which is being held on a Franklin Park pitch just opposite the Blue Hill avenue elevated station and being promoted by a newspaper which shall be nameless. For the convenience of this column I will just refer to it as the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser tournament.

Your Ace-Maker Is Unquenchable

IT WOULDN'T BE SO BAD IF SUCCESSFUL hole-in-one shooters, of which there are a deplorable host, would confess that as they stood on the tee, they had grave doubts of whether they could hit the green, or what club they should select for the occasion, and what if they sliced into the railroad tracks or hooked into the tangled wildwood.

A Slight Case Of Error

I NEVER TIRE OF TELLING ABOUT the hole-in-one which I barely missed through a slight miscalculation at St Petersburg's juncie course last Spring. I was playing with a ginger ale salesman named Ronald McCarthy, who also sold a nice sideline of potato chips

BACKFIELD PROBLEM

Boston College High school, which has caused several headaches in Boston schoolboy football ranks in the past, has games scheduled with six of the teams in the "league" this season with the possibility that a seventh will be added.

The B. C. High schedule has become more localized in recent years, the junior Eagles picking on schools more their present size whereas they used to step out to battle such opposition as Waltham, Malden, and others annually.

Included on the B. C. High list of opponents for 1936 are Latin, English, Dorchester, Commerce, Trade and Memorial.

URGES Change in BANKING

THORPE WARNS BANKERS

San Francisco, Sept. 24 (INS) — Warning that democracy in banking is "on the way out unless the present course is changed," Merle Thorpe, of Washington, editor and publisher of the Nation's Business, today declared:

I vote freedom of action, or [illegible] to [illegible] of new-style promises of [illegible]. Such liberties we [illegible] from bastards, can only be [illegible] by long and arduous effort [illegible] often of blood, and [illegible] that many times [illegible] they have never been [illegible]

"Capital attention," he said, [illegible] the man's mouth filling [illegible] with sand in the depression, it sounds like a discovery, sometimes, but it isn't. LEATHER PRICES

Demand GAIN LIFTS Prices

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The most interesting development this week in New England trade and business circles is the persistent advance in hide prices which finally found reflection in higher leather prices.

The lift in leather prices, according to Dun & Bradstreet's weekly survey of conditions in this area, amounted to as much as two cents in some instances, thus giving tanners a chance to realize some profit.

With the tendency of commodity prices could be seen much of the credit for this improved state of leather affairs we think internal conditions in the shoe manufacturing industry are really responsible. Obviously, without demand it would make little difference under present conditions whether there was a scarcity or some artificial force operating. So we give the credit to the continuance of heavy shoe production which, briefly stated, means retail trade increases resulting in a considerable volume of repeat orders.

Since the stock market persists in doing nothing of a definite nature we will confine ourselves to the section this morning for a clue to the future. But here too we found little new light shed on the market picture. Using the Associated Press averages perhaps the really important feature is the continued impotence of utilities and industrials. The former have moved in a rut less than one point each week for 13 weeks—this just about tells the whole story of the futile efforts of the same equally groups to scale new heights. The rails on the other hand are in the fourth week of sustained rise. And although in new high ground about 10 points in closing out. But we should think a rest or correction is not far off.

Notebook—For those hardy souls who still retain faith in the bull market we present certain hourly upside figures on the Dow-Jones averages . . . Touching 97.50 and 134.60 on both the rail and industrial average hourly release will, in our opinion, definitely herald the end of the closing prices for the averages . . . And, of course, a resumption of the long-term trend, judged by recent action on the tape. It looks as though the story of a new gold find—a wrong of for Alaska Juneau early this month, is true.

We will continue to cling to our long position, as presently constituted, with the added emphasis of a definite trend. While foundation at current high levels exists as well as public interest we may be sincere in the knowledge the market is traveling within such a narrow range that substantial money can without providing a reliable clue to the definite trend awaited. However, we will do nothing new unless the conditions outlined on Tuesday are not only fully met, but are met without equivocation.

Potpourri: On the French situation . . . With the emphasis on what the likely repercussions would be on domestic markets . . . In the event of immediate franc devaluation French capital might return home . . . But since a sum of only $785,000,000 in gold funds is said to be invested here security sales would not be catastrophic . . . And all of this would certainly not be repatriated . . . If a gold embargo is employed without devaluation, then devaluation then only commandeered mobilization could return funds here to France . . . And we doubt if this will happen.

MARKET Is Quiet AFFAIR TRADERS STAND BY

New York, Sept. 24—The French fiscal situation, including possibility of imminent devaluation of the franc, today tended to chill buying ardor in the stock market.

Although dealings were extremely quiet, and few issues were especially depressed, most traders were disposed to await further news from abroad before expanding commitments to any great extent.

The domestic outlook was still bright and a number of equities moved into new upside ground, but the fourth hour, small losses predominated.

The French franc, apparently with official support, held about even near the gold shipping point. Sterling and other currencies were off in terms of the dollar. French items dropped in the bond market.

Grains at Chicago exhibited advancing tendencies and cotton was irregular.

Louisville & Nashville shares got up more than 2 points. Reorganization plan was registered by Lisbo-Owens, National Department Store, R. H. Macy, Delaware & Hudson, Southern Pacific, N. Y. Central, American Locomotive, Westinghouse, U. S. Rubber and Home Mines.

Down around a point were Eastman Kodak, American Sugar Refining, Johns-Manville and General Electric.

Trade was narrow rather mostly lower, were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Santa Fe, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber, Goodyear, Du Pont, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of California, American Telephone, Consolidated Edison, North American, Douglas Aircraft, National Dairy, Deere and International Harvester.

Timely Items

The seriousness of the French situation was emphasized when the home in Wall Street by official figures indicating the republican government's gold stock in the Bank of France, last Friday, were depleted about $55,000,000 to the lowest level in 18 months.

Some brokerage and banking quarters, while generally of the opinion that the franc would be given away, advised against hurried selling of equities if such a move resulted from fear of devaluation. Others were inclined to place constructive implications on revision of the French currency, which they held to be world currency stabilization that would benefit markets.

Although the French financial crisis, with imminent devaluation of the franc a possibility, made a narrow market, some traders did not overlook domestic business news.

Reports of declarations of the quarterly dividends in the face of soaring electric power consumption, as well as steel operations, tended to bolster belief a decision on the holding company act will be handed down before the Supreme Court before the end of the year. Such a ruling, it was thought, would push the power issues ahead in other directions.

A decline in automobile exports over the next few months seems to be unavoidable, but a substantial upswing in domestic consumption is expected to accompany introduction of the 1937 models.

The Bank of France advanced its discount rate from 2 to 3 per cent on Thursday, the first shift New York foreign exchange transactions moved up .00% of a cent to 6.57 and improved at $5.07.

Boston Banker Elected by ABA

San Francisco, Sept. 24 (AP)—The American Bankers Association convention, here today, one of which has as yet been unbalanced, under the order of business finished its work on the concluding session of its sixty-second annual convention today.

The nominations' committee report was postponed after the convention named Tom K. Smith, head of the Brentwood Bank of St. Louis, president yesterday. He succeeds R. V. Fleming of Washington, D. C.

The National Bank Division of the association elected William F. Augustine, president of the First National Shawmut Bank, Boston, as its leader for the coming year.

N.Y. DEPARTMENT Store Sales Off

Sales in metropolitan New York department stores from September 7 to 12 showed a per cent under September 2 to 16, 1935 period, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of N. Y. Sales for the 6 Day this year, combined with unseasonably warm weather were attributable to the reduction.

Sales in New York and Brooklyn stores were 3% per cent behind, while Northern New Jersey sales were up 4.8 per cent. The gain in New Jersey is attributable to the sales tax that was in effect last year, which curtailed sales from July, when it went into effect, until it expired in late November.

Landon Mid-West Address On Air Tonight

By N. F. T.

Nationwide network facilities are in readiness to transmit the spirited campaign address (WNAC) at 10:30 tonight, which will be made by the Republican standard bearer and Presidential candidate, Alfred M. Landon of Kansas.

He is to speak at Minneapolis Minn.

Crowds will throng the Coliseum to attend the big rally in the Minnesota metropolis, where the Republican forces of the state are assembling to welcome their White House aspirant. Principal radio attention of the Columbia chain system will have been negotiated to carry the message from road to coast between 10:30 and 11 p. m.

VALLEE VARIETIES

Tallulah Bankhead, Bill Robinson, Walter O'Keefe, Andy Kerr and the Toronto Swingers will be Rudy Vallee's Variety Hour guests (WEEI) this evening at 8 o'clock. It's one more of the gala five-star programs inaugurated by Vallee last week.

Miss Bankhead, one of America's leading actresses, opened on Broadway this week in George Kelly's new play, "Reflected Glory." For her appearance on the Vallee Hour she will star in Ferenc Molnar's "Wine," a highly dramatic one-act play.

Helen Gleason, opera soprano, is appearing to solo on the colorful "Then and Now" program (WNAC) tonight from 10:00 to 10:30 P. M. Her talents added to that of the Abbe children, who wrote "Around the World in Eleven Years," and Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd.

Miss Gleason is well known to radio listeners for her appearances on many of radio's outstanding spectacles. Her opera career embraces engagements with the San Carlo Opera Company and with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in "Mme. Butterfly." She made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera in 1932.

BRAVE BOY

Frederick Durell Troyer-old Boy Scout of Brookfield, New York, who risked his life to save three drowning people at Cooperstown, will be the second recipient of Kate Smith's $500 weekly award for heroism. Youth will be given the prize in a formal microphone presentation this evening (WNAC) at 8:00 p. m.

The courageous young Scout was placed in nomination at last week's air show by Dr. Joseph H. Hazen, chief executive of the Boy Scouts of America and Editor of Boys' Life Magazine. The majority of the radio listeners who voted on the three candidates for the award favored Durell. Each of the runners-up will receive a $100 prize from Miss Smith.

Fete Birthday Anniversary

HARRY KANE K. WILSON

Harry Kane (left), president of Kane's Furniture Stores, host at birthday dinner, and K. Wilson, guest. Dinner was held at Kenmore Hotel as feature of opening of anniversary sale.

DEALERS PLAN 2-DAY MEET

Captain Samuel Levey of Boston, newly appointed secretary of the Metropolitan Boston Retail Liquor Package Stores Association.

A two-day conference on the inhibition law goes Monday at the Hotel Statler with prominent merchants, retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers attending.

Public relations will be the theme of the convention.

P. A. O'Connell, general chairman and president of M. T. Slattery company will welcome the delegates.

The keynote address will be given at 2 P.M.—President Mary E. Woolley of Mount Holyoke College's 100th anniversary today exercises had an influence on someone else.

Referring to the Biblical phrase, "For none of us lives to himself," Dr. Woolley pointed out that every life had something to do with building up or tearing down of the lives of others.

Streamlined Caskets Displayed

And now comes the streamline casket.

Keeping abreast of the times, funeral directors now have the privilege of serving the deceased or living with the latest model of the funereal art, a beautiful, refined design, that should satisfy the last wishes of the most fastidious.

The models are being exhibited in the exhibition hall at Mechanics Building during the present convention of the Massachusetts Funeral Directors' Association in their three-day session ending today.

The casket is of gray ingot steel, the outside fittings being of the same material. The ends are gracefully curved or rounded, leaving no sharp corners or angles. The long handles running the entire length are so arranged as to fold into the side of the casket.

The exhibitors say this is not a top-notch price, as there are already a number of heavy steel caskets, one model of which is priced at $16,000. And, strange as it may sound, there have been quite a number of the latter models sold during the last few years, notably at the funerals of underworld characters.

The newly-elected officers of the association are:

President, W. Everett King, of Clinton; vice-president, Michael J. Coughlin, Fall River; treasurer, Henry W. Clark, Melrose; sergeant-at-arms, Waldo J. Stokes, West Roxbury.

Holyoke Hears Mary E. Woolley

South Hadley, Mass., Sept. 24 (AP)—President Mary E. Woolley told 1000 students at the opening of Mount Holyoke College's 100th academic year today exercises had an influence on someone else.

Referring to the Biblical phrase, "For none of us lives to himself," Dr. Woolley pointed out that every life had something to do with building up or tearing down of the lives of others.

Kane Host As Birthday Fete Opens

In celebration of another birthday of the Kane's Furniture Stores, a large group of employes of the stores throughout the state, were feted at a dinner at Hotel Kenmore.

Harry Kane, president of the company, was host at the dinner which marked the opening of the greatest anniversary sale in the history of the Kane organization.

Commenting on the company's birthday, Kane declared:

"I am deeply grateful, on the occasion of this birthday of ours, to the more than 150,000 customers, who, through their faith in us and their support, have helped to make this institution what it is today.

"I would like to be able to take each and every one of them by the hand and thank them personally for their share in our success.

"But, since this, of course, impossible, I have arranged to say my THANK YOU with the most remarkable values we have ever offered in an anniversary sale.

"I cordially invite every homemaker in New England to celebrate with us—to share in this event and to feel that every item offered is my personal "birthday gift" in appreciation for the support that has enabled us to open four new Kane Stores this past year and which has caused us to undertake a gigantic additional expansion program, designed still further to increase our service to New England."

There are Kane Stores in Boston, Cambridge, Lynn, Hyde Park, Waltham, Framingham, Brockton, Lawrence and Quincy.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

Special membership cards and credentials will be mailed soon to those wings which have chosen junior field directors and assistant field directors of the Junior Birdmen organization, according to an announcement by national directors in New York.

So far the Boston wing has not recommended any members for appointment as junior field directors or adults as assistant field directors but expects to do so within a week or so.

Neither of the titles is recommended to national headquarters unless there is a proven desire on the part of the applicant to assist in local work and help promote the Junior Birdmen of America in its many lines of activity.

The title of junior field director is conferred upon any adult 21 years of age or older, men and women who are willing to give their time to help organize new flight squadrons, visit present squadrons at their meetings, assist in conducting model plane contests and assume other duties of a helpful nature.

The title of assistant field director is conferred on youths and girls from 16 to 21 who are members of the wing and who desire to assist in general wing activities. It is not conferred on prize winners as victory in contests does not necessarily mean that these members would be active helpers in the general work.

The assistant field director is comparable to the scout master of a Boy Scout troop. The office will be filled by teachers, church workers, Y. M. C. A. officials and other men and women of high standing in the community. The junior field director is comparable to the assistant scout master who is drawn from the ranks of the local troops to assist the scout master.

And like the scout master and assistant scout master, the assistant field director and junior field director will give their time and efforts voluntarily without compensation.

The names of several members and several adults associated with the Boston American wing will be recommended to national headquarters to serve as junior and assistant field directors here. Appointments will be for a year and maybe renewed.

A Solemn Oath on the Family Bible

This picture shows Franklin D. Roosevelt on March 4, 1933, being inaugurated as President.

At the left is Chief Justice Hughes, with his right hand raised, administering the oath.

Next to him stands the Supreme Court clerk, holding the book—AN OLD FAMILY BIBLE THAT HAS BEEN IN THE ROOSEVELT FAMILY'S POSSESSION SINCE 1670.

At the extreme right is former President Herbert Hoover.

In the center is Franklin D. Roosevelt, his left hand upon the Bible and his right hand upraised in solemn protestation of fidelity to the Constitution and to the American institutions which the Constitution defines.

The exact words of his oath were:

"I, FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT, DO SOLEMNLY SWEAR THAT I WILL FAITHFULLY EXECUTE THE OFFICE OF PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES AND WILL, TO THE BEST OF MY ABILITY, PRESERVE, PROTECT AND DEFEND THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES, SO HELP ME GOD."

President Roosevelt has sponsored and forced through Congress bills contrary to the spirit and letter of the Constitution.

On May 31, 1935, he declared the Constitution out of date.

On July 6, 1935, in a letter to Representative Sam Hill, he advised a congressional committee to pass the Guffey-Snyder coal bill regardless of "reasonable" doubt of its constitutionality.

Another President, Abraham Lincoln, took that same oath on March 4, 1861.

In a letter written to A. G. Hodges of Frankfort, Ky., in 1864, Lincoln said:

"IT WAS IN THE OATH I TOOK THAT I WOULD, TO THE BEST OF MY ABILITY, PRESERVE, PROTECT AND DEFEND THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES. "I COULD NOT TAKE THE OFFICE WITHOUT TAKING THE OATH, NOR WAS IT MY VIEW THAT I MIGHT TAKE AN OATH TO GET POWER, AND BREAK THE OATH IN USING THE POWER."

Insurance Underwriters Fear Inflation

THE NATIONAL Association of Life Underwriters, in Boston for its 47th convention, deplores the unbalanced budgets and rising taxes of the Roosevelt Administration.

In resolutions calling for the maintenance of sound currency, members of the association point out the danger of uncontrolled inflation.

What happened in Germany when the post-war government sought prosperity via the printing press route can happen here. Red ink budgets and always-on-the-rise taxes are the beginning. The rest comes later.

The underwriters realize this. And, because they know that their 63 million policy holders will be inflation's principal victims, they demand common sense in Washington.

Their resolutions were in line with the recent statements of Colonel Frank Knox, Republican vice-presidential nominee, who also deplored the squandering of public funds by the Federal Government and warned of the danger to insurance policies.

LIKE Colonel Knox, the underwriters view insurance through the eyes of the man who owns a policy and hopes for security therein. They can see neither prosperity nor good selling arguments in reduced dividends and increased rates.

Unlike Mortimer L. Nathanson, secretary of the National Association of Insurance Brokers, who recently demanded that Colonel Knox publish a retraction, the underwriters do not discuss the soundness of the companies or the present condition of policies.

The underwriters look ahead, worry about what can happen, and concern themselves chiefly with the attitude of the buyer or prospective buyer of life insurance, with the income that buyer may expect to receive, and with the security they, as sellers of policies, can reasonably promise the buyer.

IT was with this looking at policies from the view-point of the man who buys, that a group of underwriters, in a straw poll, voted six to one in favor of Governor Landon's election to the presidency.

And it was this same regard for the welfare of policy holders that the underwriters' national president, Lester O. Shriver, declared:

"I believe Mr. Landon to be sound, substantial and responsible."

The Hidden Truth Hurts

THE squirming of the New Deal under public revelation of the part played by hidden taxes in the increasingly high cost of living proves the old adage that THE TRUTH HURTS.

Distribution of placards by the Republican National Committee, giving the people of the United States full information regarding hidden taxes, is protested by Attorney-General Cummings, who says:

"There are indications that the placards were put out to affect the coming election."

Mr. Cummings is probably right. The Republican Committee DOES have the idea that if the people KNOW THE TRUTH ABOUT TAXES, it will influence their votes.

It is the purpose of the Republican Committee to let the American people know WHERE THE NEW DEAL IS GETTING THE MONEY IT IS SPENDING.

The New Dealers apparently do not want the people to have this information. Perhaps they prefer to have the people believe money spent by the Federal government grows on trees.

When the average citizen fully understands that New Deal extravagance is being financed OUT OF HIS POCKET, that fact will certainly affect the coming election.

Who can argue that the people WHO PAY THE TAXES do not have the right to know WHERE THE MONEY COMES FROM and WHERE IT GOES?

An Important Conference

THE Boston Conference on Distribution, opening Monday, is one of the important events of the year. Nationally known merchants, retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers will attend. And registrations from as far West as San Francisco have been received.

The conference, well-named "The Williamstown for Problems of Distribution," is actually a forum, where, under the sponsorship of the Retail Trade Board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, business leaders and executives meet to consider every phase of distribution and public relations.

Of especial interest this year will be discussions of legislative trends, price fixing and foreign trade.

Sharing credit with the Retail Trade Board are the enterprising merchants of Boston, through whose efforts a varied and comprehensive program has been arranged.

New York Day by Day -:- By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Sept. 24—Louis Bromfield, the novelist, is back at his historic chateau at Senlis, a short motor spin from Paris, after a tour of the Far East, where he made such an impression he now has as guest a full blown Maharajah. Of Baroda, no less, whom he visited in India.

The Mansfield, O., author, is said to be one of the close friends of the fabulous Gaekwar, and the latter breaking tradition in hob-nob with an Occidental is proof of the rumor. Bromfield tossed a party for the "Maj" at Les Ambassadeurs in Paris. Diplomats and everything.

The caves of the richest Maharajah is more thrilling than anything in fiction. Bromfield ever turned out. Originally, the ruler was a lowly barefoot shepherd boy, living in peasant simplicity. According to custom, an English commission picked him out, pot luck fashion, along his ancient plateau.

Thus chosen, the boy from obscurity was tutored in languages, history, politics and economics. And otherwise polished up. His responsibility is absolute power over millions, with the vast wealth, palaces and elephants that go with it. Even a carriage of pure gold!

Humor in advertising on 10th avenue: "Pants $1.75 a leg—seats free."

Two Bob Burns names from the current news: Chad Gillett, member of a musical family on a radio program and Dempster Pottis, leader of the Townsendites from Wichita, Kans.

O. O. McIntyre

Billy De Beck remains the true illuming comicker—especially with his stants on the hill people. He is never funnier than when drawing whiskers. One imagines him roaring with laughter as Montague Glass used to writing Potash and Perlmutter dialogue. Usually I have a string halt slant toward comic strips, but De Beck can land me—even to the point of what The New Yorker calls the ballet laugh.

I once dropped in on De Beck in West 86th street where he had piled up drawings for 16 weeks in lieu of a jaunt to Europe. One might imagine drawings thus made would grow strained, pointless. But I watched and they held up to the end.

At Waverly place and Christopher street is one of New York's oldest buildings—the first Flat Iron, by the way, standing as it has since Old New York was young and hoop skirted. Inside is the Northern Dispensary, a privately endowed philanthropic effort presided over by Will Luks, a kindly man in a white coat who suggests Richard Carle in his thinner days.

In spare time of evenings, Luks is writing the biography of his brother, George Luks, modern mentor among American painters. George Luks was one of the most jovial geniuses who ever lived, laughed and scattered witticisms. He knew how to wrestle, box, dance, sing, imitate zoos and brass bands.

Human Side of the News -:- By Edwin C. Hill

Just the other day I came upon a brief paragraph in the foreign dispatches which, in its half dozen lines, compressed a page of "The Human Side of the News." Paul Chabas, famous French artist, confided to a Parisian journalist that "September Morn" is now 41, married to a rich French industrialist, the mother of three lovely children and no longer as slender as when she posed in sweet nudity for the painting whose celebrity swept the world.

Edwin C. Hill

Do you remember "September Morn"—the portrait of the young girl standing in a pool, in unadorned loveliness? One has to go back 25 years for the beginning of the tale.

It began in Paris, as it has ended. There, in 1910, lived a prosperous, affable, middle-aged and modestly talented artist named Paul Chabas. For years he had exhibited at the annual Paris Salon, attracting respectful notice, though very little enthusiasm.

UNNOTICED AT FIRST

Paul Chabas met an artists' model—a beautiful girl of 16, whose delicate charm fascinated him. Throughout the summers of 1910 and 1911 he worked on her portrait. To do it they had to spend the summers at Lake Annecy, near the Swiss border. Every warm morning, at 8:30, Chabas and his model would walk down to the edge of the water, where she would take off her clothes and adopt the pose with which the whole world has since become familiar.

For 30 minutes he would paint, carefully and meticulously, for he was a slow and thorough worker. Then both would adjourn until the next favorable day. By the end of the second summer "September Morn" was finished.

Exhibited at the Salon (the French Royal Academy) in 1912, it attracted a medal and just the same polite but uncharted comment from critics to which Chabas had been accustomed for 25 years. No one seemed to want to buy the picture. Chabas brought it to New York, where a firm named Braun exhibited it in their Manhattan window.

The next character to appear in this remarkable drama is Anthony Comstock, perhaps the most famous of all Puritans. And, if Anthony Comstock, ever on the alert for anything calculated to besmirch or corrupt the morals of the free Republic of the United States, had not happened to be strolling, eagle-eyed, down 46th street, New York, one afternoon in May, 1913, the rest of the events recounted here would almost certainly never have taken place.

He saw the painting of the nude girl in the window. She stood up to her shins in water and seemed afraid to go in further. The picture was labelled "September Morn." Comstock was enraged and horrified. He stormed into the shop.

"There's too little morning and too much maid," he roared to the manager. "Take it out."

But the manager refused. The next day all New York, and very soon all the world, had heard of "September Morn."

STORM OF PROTEST

It raised a storm of controversy in every newspaper. Reproductions of the picture were on calendars, cigars, suspenders, postcards, chocolate boxes. Crowds fought to see the original. A couplet of anonymous authorship swept the English-speaking world. It went:

"Please do not think I'm bad or bold,
But where it's deep, it's awful cold."

Comstocks arose in every community in America and Europe. Furious anti-Comstocks shouted them down. The picture was world-famous. And now Chabas, world-famous, too, recalls that his charming young model (whose name was never revealed) is middle-aged and married, a contented mother and, alas, growing plump with the years.

But her famous portrait hangs now in a luxurious mansion in Passy, the Mayfair of Paris, the proud possession of an oil magnate who is one of the richest men in the world.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

If you have to diagnose the emotion you feel for a man, it isn't LOVE; because love is something as unmistakable as hunger, rheumatism or a sprained ankle.

Time, like distance, lends enchantment; and the more a man rhapsodizes over one of his old flames, the more confident his wife feels that, when they meet she will turn out to be a stylish stout with a double chin and a giggle.

A bridegroom might just as well be pleasant when his wife's bills come in. He will have to pay just as much, anyhow.

A woman's nervous headaches may be cured by a doctor; but a good lawyer can sometimes do it much more effectually by removing the husband that is getting on her nerves.

A gold-digger's work is as painless as flattery can make it—only a wife is licensed to operate on her husband's pocketbook without an anaesthetic.
